How the Sacred College Voted on the New Members

As Pope Pius took his place upon the throne Monsignor Tani, master of ceremonies, pronounced the ancient order of "Exeant Omnes" and the doors were closed. Cardinal Vannutelli read the names of the cardinals designate from his station, on the right of the Pontiff. Pius X then faced the sacred college and asked in Latin: "How comes this to you?"

POPE INVESTS 18 CARDINALS

BOSTON AMERICAN

HOME EDITION

VOL. 8—No. 250. BOSTON, MONDAY, NOVEMBER 27, 1911. Registered in U. S. Patent Office. PRICE ONE CENT.

3 AMERICAN CARDINALS INVESTED

By C. O'CONNELL GALVIN.

Special representative of the Boston American with the American Cardinals at Rome.

ROME, Nov. 27.—The secret consistory which elevated Archbishops O'Connell of Boston, Farley of New York and Mgr. Falconi of Washington to the cardinalate was held to-day in Consistorial Hall of the Vatican. By the same impressive ceremony sixteen other prelates were raised to the dignity of princes of the church.

The name of the nineteenth Cardinal created was withheld, but churchmen stated their belief that it was the Patriarch of Lisbon.

As Pope Pius took his place upon the throne, Mgr. Tani, master of ceremonies, pronounced the ancient order of "Exeant Omnes," and the doors were closed. Cardinal Vannutelli read the names of the cardinals-designate from his station to the right of the Pontiff. Pius X. then faced the Sacred College and asked in Latin:

"How seems this to you."

At the end of the secret ballot the doors were thrown open again and the Pope was borne by the Swiss guards back to his apartment. Following the conclusion of the conclave the master of ceremonies, Mgr. D. Amico, Mgr. Canali, private secretary to Merry del Val, papal secretary of state, Mgr. Rizzi, secretary to the apostolic committee, visited the cardinals-designati, officially notifying them of their election to be princes of the Church of Rome.

The notification was in the shape of a letter from the Pope informing each of his elevation and instructing each to attend the throne room of the Vatican on Wednesday and receive his red biretta preparatory to the public consistory Thursday.

The ceremonies began at 9 o'clock. As this was one of the few devotional consistories in which there was not a dissenting vote, the election was soon over. Soon afterward it was reported among the churchmen gathered in Rome for the ceremony that the complete list of cardinals contained twenty-one names, three additions being made to the original list of eighteen cardinals-designate at the last minute, and that an official statement to this effect would be issued later in the day.

After the cardinals-designate had received official notification of their elevation they held a public reception to receive the congratulations of distinguished visitors. The scene was a gorgeous one. Each cardinal sent his gentleman-in-waiting and secretary with congratulations. With these came the heads of the great religious orders, prelates accompanied by their suites in variegated costume, together with hundreds of students of the American college in their black cassocks with red sashes, blue buttons and white collars.

OTHERS ELEVATED TO SACRED COLLLEGE.

The Pope's address deplored the attacks upon the church throughout Europe during the last year, calling it a "year of mourning for the church." But the chief source of regret was the Italian jubilee, which recalled the separation of the church from the unification of Italian states. The pontiff also deplored the impunity wherewith Protestants and Freemasons opposed the church in Rome.

The address lamented the separation of the church from the state in Portugal after the fall of the monarchy. The pontiff declared that Spain did not wish to adopt any offensive attitude toward the institution of religion.

The other new Cardinals are:

Monsignor Cosy Macho, Archbishop of Valladolid.

Monsignor A. Vico, Papal Nuncio at Madrid.

Monsignor J. Granito di Belmont e Pignatelli.

Archbishop Francis Bourne of Westminster.

Archbishop Francis S. Bauer of Olmuetz.

Monsignor L. A. Audette, Archbishop of Paris.

Monsignor F. B. Dubillard, Archbishop of Chambery.

Archbishop Franz X. Nagel of Vienna.

Monsignor de Gabriers, Bishop of Montpellier, France.

Monsignor Bisleti, Papal Major Domo.

Monsignor Lugari, Assessor of the Holy Office.

Monsignor Pompeli, secretary of the Congregation Council.

Monsignor Billot of the Jesuit Order.

Monsignor Van Rossum, Redemptionist.

Monsignor Enrique de Almarez, Archbishop of Seville.

Sixth Consistory in Recent Years.

This was the sixth Consistory held in the pontificate of Pope Pius X. Owing to the precarious state of the health of the Pontiff, it is not unlikely that this Con-

HUGHES WINS SAVANNAH RACE

SAVANNAH, Nov. 27.—Hugh Hughes, in a Mercer car, to-day won the Savannah challenge trophy.

Frank Witt, in an E-M-F car, won the Tiedman trophy. His time was 1:76:19.

The Marmon car, driven by Louis Heineman, got away in the Savannah challenge trophy for the first lap of the first race which served as a curtain raiser for the greatest exhibition of road races ever staged on the American continent.

This event was 221 miles, 13 laps of the course, and was for the Savannah challenge trophy, the donors' trophy and $1,000.

There was also a cup for the mechanician of the winning car. The event was open to cars classified under American Association rules as Class C, division 3 C for cars of a piston displacement of 231 to 300 cubic inches.

List of Drivers.

The cars and their drivers in the order in which they started were:

TURKEY PRICES GOING HIGHER

Receipts of Western turkey for Thanksgiving consumption which reached Boston to-day by express were considerably lighter than expected. As a result the wholesale price of turkey has risen from one-half cent to a cent a pound. Although the retail market has been only slightly affected, it is believed that the consumer will feel the full effect of this shortage by to-morrow or Wednesday in an advance in price of the Thanksgiving bird of from two or three cents per pound.

Although the wholesalers concede that this has been the best turkey year in half a decade, they declare the price will not be lower than the unusually high prices of the last two years, because the raisers in the West, having become acustomed to stiff prices for their product, are holding out for good prices.

Reports last week from the West indicated that large shipments for the Boston market would be started, but the farmers have curtailed these shipments for the Christmas trade.

The retail price ranges from twenty-five to twenty-eight cents a pound for Western turkeys, and from thirty-five to thirty-eight cents for the choice Vermont variety. As a consolation for the continued high prices, dealers reply that the quality is the best that has reached this city in years. This excellence, they declare, is the result of the favorable weather and the lateness of Thanksgiving this year, which has enabled the raisers to ship the gobbler to the market in prime condition, juicy and tender.

NANKING TAKEN BY THE REBELS

SHANGHAI, Nov. 27.—The rebels captured part of the city of Nanking at noon to-day. The city's complete capture is imminent.

An overwhelming victory of the imperialist army at Hankow was announced by the Foreign office to-day. Minister Li ng Tun Yen declared that the loyalist soldiers had captured three forts at Hankow, and that that city and also the adjoining city of Han-Yang on the opposite bank of the Han River would be in the hands of the government troops before night.

The bombardment of Nanking continued for a considerable time without interruption. There is an unconfirmed report that 800 imperialists have been killed.

FINDS 4 FRIENDS DIED IN FEW DAYS

EAST BROOKFIELD, Nov. 27.—Louis Champeux of Stafford Springs, Ct., came to town to look up old acquaintances. At Vizard's drug store he asked for Herman Anderson. The clerk told him Anderson died five days ago. At Eli M. Forbes's variety store he learned that his old friend George Bemis had dropped dead three weeks ago. He asked how George Henry Allen was faring. "Passed away suddenly six weeks back," said the man behind the counter. "Well, then, how's Aaron Hammond?" "Aaron fell dead Thursday." "Aaron dead, too?" Champeux left town on the 3:08 train. A visit which he had planned to last several days was cut short to exactly fifty-eight minutes.

FRANCE GIVES ITALY NOTICE

PARIS, Nov. 27.—France to-day served notice of official protest to the Italian government against the proposed blockade of the Dardanelles by Italian warships.

KILLS HIMSELF AFTER SHOOTING HIS CHUM

After shooting Arthur Caradontes, twenty-nine years old, at a lodging house at No. 65 Centre street, early to-day, Thomas Colluchi, thirty-two, ran to a vacant lot at the corner of Centre and Cedar streets, a block away, and fired two shots through his own body, dying within a short time. Colluchi was angered because Caradontes refused to loan him money. He fired five shots at Caradontes, but only one took effect. Caradontes, who was taken to the City Hospital, is expected to recover.

TWO CITIES TO TEST CHARTERS

The new charters of Lawrence and Lowell receive their first tryouts at the primary elections to be held in the two cities to-morrow, to nominate candidates for municipal offices.

The polls at Lowell will open at noon and close at 9 o'clock. The voters will nominate two candidates for Mayor, eight for aldermen and ten candidates for the school committee. In December a Mayor, four aldermen and five school committeemen will be elected. The present form of government by a Mayor, board of aldermen and common council will be abolished as also will be all party designations.

The feature of this election will be the part the women voters are to take in the election of the school committeemen. More than 6,000 women have registered and all intend to vote. The total male registration is 15,500. Rallies at mill gates and street corners in the interests of the four candidates for Mayor and eighty-three candidates for aldermen have given life to the most unusual municipal campaign ever conducted in Lowell.

The polls at Lawrence will open at 6 a. m., and close at 4 p. m. There are 102 candidates for offices. For Mayor there are five; for aldermen for one year, fifty; aldermen for two years, thirty-four; school committee for one year, seven; for two years, six.

The candidates for Mayor are: Mayor John T. Cahill, Alderman Michael A. Scanlon, Michael J. Sullivan, ex-Mayor James F. Leonard and Thomas Griffin. The Mayor's term of office will be two years instead of one as under the present charter.

CANDY GIRL AT HARVARD QUITS

The identity of the pretty candy girl of Cambridge, who distracted the mind of young John W. Dahlgren, son of Mrs. Harry Lehr of New York, from his studies at Harvard to such an extent that he was taken out of that college, was learned to-day.

She is Miss Mabel Hobbs. She was located to-day in Providence, where she had gone following the severing of her connection with the Cambridge candy store. One of the friends of Miss Hobbs to-day made this statement:

"Mabel jilted the rich New Yorker. He was in love with her, but she cared more for another young man and is engaged to be married to him."

Dahlgren is nineteen. His mother was a daughter of the Philadelphia Drexels. He came to Harvard when college opened this year. He was lonesome. Hard by his quarters at No. 39 Brattle street is a candy store. Dropping in there for a soda, he caught sight of Miss Hobbs.

From that time on soda was Dahlgren's regular beverage and he ate candy and ice cream in quantities that would have made Owen Johnson's "Hungry Smead" hang his head in an agony of envy.

Every latin and French word that Dahlgren caught sight of in his studies was freely translated candy with an occasional elongation into "Candy Kid."

The symptoms were easy to John P. Nolan, the Harvard tutor. He'd seen them full many a time and oft and when the man that runs the candy store objected to the freshman monopolizing his most alluring candy girl, in a report to Nolan, the genial tutor tried moral suasion.

He doubted if it would work. His doubts were confirmed. Then Nolan wrote to Dahlgren's mother who was in Paris. The young student received some epistles from across the sea couched in affectionate but firm tones. This is what she wrote:

"Quit the candy girl or you quit Harvard."

3,000 TURKISH TROOPS SLAIN

ROME, Nov. 27.—Dispatches from Tripoli received here to-day stated that the fighting between the Italians and the Turks with their Arab allies at Detna was more severe than at first reported. They gave the Turks' casualties as 3,000. The action lasted until sundown.

After several hours' fighting the Italians succeeded in dislodging the Arabs, and General Frugones, commander of the Italian forces, ordered the Third Division on the east front to advance toward Henni. Part of the Sixth Brigade joined the men of the Third, taking up a position so as to protect the division from attack from the direction of Ainzara and prevent a junction of the Arabs and Turks.

The new front will extend from Mesri to Henni. As soon as the Italians are established reinforcements will be rushed up to positions strongly entrenched by the engineers.

The Italian advance, it is reported, was a complete success at every point. The fighting, which lasted all day, terminated by the Turks retiring from all their positions.

An Italian reconnoissance on the plateau outside the city resulted in an encounter with the Turks in force. The fighting lasted all day, and both sides retired on their positions. The Italian casualty list numbered twelve killed and thirty-eight wounded.

LICENSE INDORSED BY CHELSEA UNION

The Chelsea Central Labor Union has indorsed license for that city, and also favored the petition of the members of the fire department for one day off in five. Opposition to prohibition is based on the claim that no-license breeds kitchen barrooms in residential sections besides throwing many men out of work.

Weak Kidneys Weaken the Whole Body

Don't neglect the slightest kidney ailment. Begin using Doan's Kidney Pills at once. They are especially for sick kidneys. Endorsed by Boston people.

Every Picture Tells A Story

John A. Newman, 7 School Place, Cambridge, Mass., says: "My kidneys were in bad shape and I realized that unless I found relief the complaint would soon get the better of me. There was a dull grinding pain in the small of my back and it was only with difficulty that I could straighten after stooping. The kidney secretions were highly colored and irregular in passage and I did not sleep well. I doctored faithfully, but the physicians seemed unable to help me. Through the use of Doan's Kidney Pills my health was restored and my kidneys became normal."

POISON DRINK KILLS A SINGER

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—Coroner Shongut of the Bronx to-day issued subpoenas for the members of a convivial party which gathered at the Van Courtlandt Park Golf House yesterday and which ended with the death from carbolic acid poisoning of Miss Alice Tristam, a professional singer.

"I am convinced from my investigation," said the coroner, "that the woman did not take the poison intentionally, and that her death is the result of a joke, so-called."

The coroner pointed out that the poison was crude carbolic acid, that it had been used as a disinfectant and had been placed in a Vermuth bottle.

"The bottle with the poison" was brought from the basement of the building and was on the table of the restaurant where the woman undoubtedly poured forth a drink. She probably thought that it was Vermoth.

"The party at the table was a gay one, and the unfortunate woman had been in[illegible]ing heavily. Dr. Thomas H. Curtain, who has been aiding me in the investigation, says that it would have been impossible for the woman to have taken the draught of poison and then come upstairs to join the party at the table. She died in the ambulance on the way to the hospital.

"I have officers now seeking every man in that party about the table, and will hold an inquest as soon as I can get the witnesses."

WALES 'PRINCE' IS DEAD AT 71

WALES, Mass., Nov. 27.—The "Prince of Wales" is dead. He was Herbert A. McFarland. Everybody in this town, and thousands in the eastern section of the county said to-day that it would be impossible to fill his place in his relations to the people.

For forty years he was the court of first and last resort to people in trouble. His decrees were never questioned. He died without an enemy.

Mr. McFarland was seventy-one years of age. From a poor boy he became a rich land holder. But there was nothing of the grasping landlord, the pardmon [illegible] who lived for himself alone, about him. His life was singularly one devoted to the welfare of his community. Here are some of the positions he held:

Secretary and treasurer of the savings bank.
Served in all the town offices.
Served in the House of Representatives.
Leader in Wales Baptist Church.
Superintendent of Sunday school.
Teacher in Sunday school.
Leader of the choir.
Associate Justice of the District Court.

Although not a lawyer, he was learned in the law. It was as the Village Squire, in settling differences, arbitrating quarrels, fixing up family rows, smoothing the troubled pathways of the old and the young, that he really found his great vocation.

And when he was dubbed the "Prince of Wales," it was because he was a veritable prince in the hearts of the people.

SEARCH THE STADIUM FOR MISSING JEWELS

Police and private detectives, spurred on by promises of a big reward, are making an exhaustive search to locate a $3,000 combination diamond pin and pendant lost by Mrs. Edward M. Bradley of New Haven at the Harvard-Yale football game.

The officers are puzzled to know whether she was the victim of pickpockets or of her own carelessness. The pendant was of diamond shape and contained about 100 diamonds.

The report was made to the pouice by D. E. Manson of No. 384 Clinton road, Brookline, the Bradleys having been guests of the Mansons. It was not until the young woman had returned from the football game that she missed the jewels. A search was immediately begun about the house, but without results.

Several policemen went to the Stadium, lanterns in hand, and made a search until late Saturday evening.

MARX DAUGHTER AND HUSBAND DIE

Socialists and thousands of others in Boston and New England who have read the works of Karl Marx, the founder of one of the great movements for the social betterment of the world, will find it hard to understand a cable from Paris to-day which tells of the double suicide of his daughter and her husband at their beautiful home in France.

Laura Marx was married to Paul Lafargue who went to France from Cuba. They lived on their estate at Dravell and their world of acquaintances always regarded them as ideally happy.

Lafargue, a student of the books and a fervent follower of the ideas advanced by his father-in-law, was one of the leaders in the French socialist movement. He wrote voluminously on the various subjects that came before the people on socialistic matters.

Labor Party Leader.

A strong supporter of the French Labor Party, Lafargue was for a long time its secretary. He had also served the country as a deputy. His more recent public appearance was at the congress of the United Socialists of Paris in November.

Although sixty-eight years of age and gray in the service that he had given to his cause, he appeared strong and vigorous and there was nothing about his actions or optimistic views that led anyone to think that he contemplated the act that blotted out his life and that of his wife.

Lafargue and his wife were counted rich and there was no reason why they could not have lived out their lives in comfort. But this student of life had apparently given a great deal of study also to death and from a letter he left to his nephew it became apparent that he believed that when age crept on and the intellect grew weary and weak, that it were better to drop into the long sleep that knows no waking in this life. This is what he wrote to his nephew:

Resolved to Die.

"I feel that age is coming on. I can no longer keep up my work. Life without work is nothing. I have resolved to die."

But just how his wife, who was a lineal descendant through her mother of the Earl of Argyll, who was beheaded by James II., and who was also a student of her distinguished father's philosophy, came to join her husband in his death-scheme, was not made public.

In his letter to his nephew, the cables from Paris say, he did not mention that his wife was to join him in death. But it is believed that when he told her that he had resolved to die that she, too, replied that she did not dare to live without him and that the double death pact was agreed upon.

Lafargue had made a study of poisons, it appeared. It was found that he had experimented with prussic acid by injecting it into the blood. He had found that it would kill almost instantly and without prolonged suffering.

No details are given of how this aged philosophical writer and the daughter of one of the world's deepest thinkers and most optimistic souls, took their own lives, solemnly and with as much appreciation of their acts as though they were making a journey to Paris.

But when their bodies were found it was ascertained that prussic acid—one of the deadliest of poisons—had been injected into the blood of each and that they had gone to rest as though they had fallen asleep.

New Tuberculosis Remedy Based on Medicine

To say that a specific exists for the cure of Consumption is perhaps too strong a statement, but in Eckman's Alterative we have a medicine that has been the means of saving many a life to years of usefulness, and in permanently curing a large number of Consumptives.

Certainly a person afflicted with a wasting disease should be well fed with wholesome, nourishing food, but frequently raw eggs in quantities cause a digestive breakdown, and then no food nourishes. As for milk, a very good food for many, but a producer of biliousness for some.

Any diet that keeps a Consumptive well nourished is the right one, but what is going to cure the patient? Eckman's Alterative has cured and is curing many a case of Consumption. Let those speak who know. Here is a specimen:

90 Savannah St., Rochester, N. Y.
"Gentlemen: On June 3, 1907, I was operated upon for Tubercular peritonitis, at St. Mary's Hospital, Rochester, N. Y. After the operation my physician gave me up as hopeless. I was then urged by a priest to take Eckman's Alterative, which I did. My weight at the time was 72 lbs. I began to improve and steadily gained in health and strength. I now weigh 125 lbs., and am absolutely cured. Believing I owe it to myself and others I make this statement."
(Signed Affadavit) EDNA FINZER.

Eckman's Alterative is effective in Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever, Throat and Lung Troubles, and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain poisons, opiates or habit-forming drugs. For sale by all Riker-Jaynes Stores, Houghton & Dutton Drug Dept. and other leading druggists. Ask for booklet of cured cases and write to Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for additional evidence.

LONDON REJECTS CZAR'S FAVORITE

LONDON, Nov. 27.—Madame Mathilde Kchessinska, the dancer, who in Russia occupies something of the position that Madame de Pompadour held in her palmiest days in France, has not made the hit which Covent Garden managers hoped when they expressly imported her for the purpose of submerging Oscar Hammerstein's opera.

The fact is, court circles have given Kchessinska a wide berth, and with the court circles Covent Garden is little better than the provincial barn. The execution of this royal boycott has just leaked out and carries with it the explanation why Mathilde Kchessinska's professional appearance in London was carefully dated so as not to take place until after the departure of the King and Queen for the Durbar.

Mme. Kchessinska really came to London last June, bearing a letter from the Czar to the Russian Ambassador. She wished to dance at the Coronation gala performance.

Count Beckendorff made every effort to have her included in the Covent Garden program, and unwisely approached the King, who, of course, consulted Queen Mary, with the result of a prompt refusal.

Frowned on by Queen.

Kchessinska remained in town, however, and "chaperoned" by the Grand Duke Andrei, occupied a box at the opera on the night that the King and Queen paid a final visit to Covent Garden before leaving for India. Queen Mary, finding herself face to face with Mme. Kchessinska and Grand Duke Andrei, frowned throughout the evening and never once applauded the performance.

A large portion of the Russian royalty is now in London incognito. Indeed Kchessinska is credited with so much power in Russia that even the Grand Duchess Vladimir is coming to London to witness the dancer's success from fear, it is reported, that if she is in any way offended, Kchessinska, the dancer, might ruin her son's career. Grand Duke Sergius also is coming.

Close Friend of Czar.

Mme. Kchessinska is the only woman in Russia, save the Empress, to whom the Czar has ever paid any attention. She is one of the half dozen persons in the world who have the privilege of direct communication with the Czar, and any letter or telegram to him from her is given him unopened. In Russia Mme. Kchessinska dances only when especially commanded by the Czar. This happens only on rare occasions. She yields to royal command merely to gratify her love of the art, never for the vulgar purpose of money making.

For Mme. Kchessinska, be it understood, is the richest actress and the richest dancer in the world. She has two palaces in Russia, at both of which the Grand Duke Andrei is obeyed by the servants with as much deference as they accord to their beautiful and famous mistress.

NO REPLY YET FOR THE GERAGHTYS

NEWPORT, Nov. 27.—Mr. and Mrs. "Happy Jack" Geraghty are feverishly anxious about the result of the invitations they have extended to the relatives of the one-time Julie French to attend their Thanksgiving dinner.

Mrs. Geraghty is a niece of Mrs. Elsie French Vanderbilt. Seven of the young husband's kin have accepted the invitation, but there is grave doubt about the members of the French family, who have to this time held aloof from the bungalow in Everett street, where the former chauffeur and his bride have their happy home.

Mrs. Geraghty has developed fast in culinary science and in marketing, according to Garaghty, who says that every detail of Thursday's feast will be managed by her, although he admits they have a cook in the house.

WIFE OF SYMPHONY 'CELLIST AMBITIOUS TO BE GREAT PAINTER.

In a charming studio which looks like a Parisian atelier transplanted to St. Botolph street, Madame Piutti-Barth is placing upon canvas her conception of American beauty.

Musical Boston is in a furore over the work of Madame Barth, who is the wife of Carl Barth, the Boston Symphony cellist, and who has painted the portraits of many of the best known musicians.

Mrs. Max Fiedler, wife of the conductor of the Symphony, Carl Stasny, Lydia Lipkowska, Miss Grace Collier, Carl Barth, Mrs. Helen Gertz Hauers, sister of the president of the Mason & Hamlin Piano Company, and Mrs. Theodore H. Bauer are only a few of those who have sat for Madame Barth.

The Barths live at No. 18 St. Botolph street. They have transformed an ordinary American studio apartment into the sort of quarters that European artists love to inhabit, a large, irregular room full of canvases, statuary, comfortable divans and tapestries.

Madame Barth, herself, is a very attractive woman, and speaks English without a trace of accent, although she was born and brought up in Germany.

She has been painting seriously for little more than three years, although she has always been anxious to paint, and the masters who taught her as a young girl urged her parents to permit her to make painting her life work.

"One of the things that I admire in America," said Mrs. Barth, "is the fact that it is not considered improper here for a girl to do something useful, something that will help her earn her living if she should be thrown on the world by any chance.

"My parents gave me an excellent education, but they were horrified at the thought of my becoming a professional painter, although I had a natural aptitude for it, and was always crazy to have a brush in my hand. They made me give up all idea of such a career and settle down to being a young lady, able to do nothing.

"When I married, naturally domestic concerns kept me from indulging in art, but recently I have devoted myself to painting with what people tell me are excellent results.

"My daughter is nearly sixteen years old, and I have determined that she shall be brought up differently. She shall be taught useful things so that if it should ever be necessary she can earn her own living."

Madame Barth was born in Leipsic. Her father was a composer and organist at the celebrated Thomas Church, a church in which Johann Sebastian Bach, the father of modern music, was director for many years.

She was taught a little painting as she was taught music and other accomplishments, but she displayed such proficiency that her teacher, Klammroth, who has since exhibited a remarkable portrait of Nikisch, the conductor, pleaded with her father to allow her to become a professional painter.

Madame Barth was compelled to give up her ambiton, and some years afterwards came to America as the wife of the cellist, who had secured a position with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. In recent years, however, she has resumed her studies, going to Max Fabian in Berlin and to the Boston School of Painting.

Her portraits are striking, for her color combinations are unusual and effective. She has a keen perception and a knack of getting the proper expression which means accurate portraiture.

Madame Barth intends to give an exhibition of her paintings in her studio from December 5 to 9. Most of those whose pictures she has painted have consented to her showing them.

MRS. PATTERSON SCORES STRAUSS

DENVER, Nov. 27.—"Strauss is a cur. Why doesn't he come to my aid? He is hiding in a hole like a dog. I have learned a lesson and the son whom I thought was a man, I have found to be a cur of the lowest type."

Mrs. Gertrude Paterson thus unburdened herself in her cell in the county jail here to-day. She snapped her fingers and her tear-filled eyes flashed fire as she spoke bitterly of her one-time benefactor.

Not satisfied with her denunciation of Strauss, the Chicago millionaire, who has figured in the case, she proceeded to tell what she thought of Prosecutor Benson, and incidentally had some fault to find with her counsel, Judge Hilton, because, she said, he had not coached her and she did not know what to expect when the prosecutor should cross-examine her.

"Don't take me back to that stand," wailed Mrs. Patterson to-day. "I don't care what becomes of me, but don't take me back there. That man, Benson, is murdering me by degrees and I can't stand it any longer.

"If he would only ask questions that were true, I would not mind, but he has been asking questions that have no meaning and are lies. Some one has been telling him infamous lies about me and he is killing me by inches.

"I would rather die in the electric chair a dozen times than go through what I have in the past week," added the pretty defendant.

Mrs. Patterson's attorney says he will put St. Louis witnesses on the stand to prove his client bore a good reputation in that city.

Mr. Hilton also promises to put the principal of the Sandoval, Ill., School on the stand to explain why Mrs. Patterson was barred from his school.

The second week of the trial began to-day, with the prosecution having closed its direct case and the defence having placed on the stand its most material witness, Mrs. Patterson.

The defence promises to introduce witnesses to corroborate the woman's account of abuse by her husband. A witness who is expected to corroborate Mrs. Patterson's story will also be produced.

In rebuttal, the State will place Mrs. Mary K. Patterson, mother of the dead husband, on the stand, and it is expected that she will testify as to the physical soundness of her son prior to the time he met Gertrude Gibson.

The prosecution will endeavor to introduce numerous letters written by Patterson, to his brother, a Chicago attorney, in which he freely discussed his private affairs. Probably also the prosecution will attempt to introduce what purports to be the dead man's diary, written in the form of day notes or letters to his mother. This diary, which was found among Patterson's effects, has been in the possession of the prosecution from the first, and frequent reference has been made to it in the cross-examination of Mrs. Patterson.

In writing to his mother, July 1, Patterson said:

> When you say in your letter, "O, how I wish she would only act squarely and leave you entirely and not be a snake in the grass," you said a whole lot. If ever there was a woman who was a demon on earth in her home, and then makes outsiders believe she is terribly maltreated, it is her; the lies she tells and the way she can work on people's feelings makes outsiders believe me a devil.

CAN TAKE HUSBAND'S BILLS, BUT NOT NOTES

WASHINGTON, Nov, 27.—"A wife must not go through her husband's pockets and take from them letters written to him by other women," Judge Mullowney ruled, when Elton Jackson accused his wife of assaulting him. Recently Judge Mullowney ruled that a woman might go through her husband's pockets and remove all the money she found there. To-day he carefully differentiated between money and letters.

WRIGHTS BEATEN BY TILLINGHAST

WORCESTER, Nov. 27.—Wallace E. Tillinghast of this city has a monopoly on motorless aeroplanes under a patent granted April 14, 1910, although the carefully guarded secret was not even suspected by his closest friends until to-day.

It now appears that the Orville and Wilbur Wright experiments with motorless fliers at Kitty Hawk, N. C., were discontinued because of Tillinghast patent rights, which are fully protected under patent application No. [illegible].

It was the possession of this secret device, attached to the Tillinghast aeroplane, that enabled the Worcester inventor to hover over Long Island Sound for a full hour when making his mysterious midnight flight of two years ago, despite the fact that his motor was disabled at that time.

The experiments made by the Wright Brothers at Kitty Hawk gave ample proof that aeroplane soaring without motor-driven appliances was possible, even with their imperfect gliders.

But, while the Wright Brothers only succeeded in maintaining the equilibrium of their aero staff for ten minutes, it will be recalled that the Tillinghast machine is said to have made a motorless flight of more than an hour with Tillinghast and three mechanicians aboard some two years ago.

The secret unfolded in the discovery of Tillinghast's patent rights to-day, his friends say, is a complete vindication of the Worcester inventor. If his motor-

MARY M'GOVERN, BEFORE AND AFTER "SNIPPER'S" WORK

MARY M'GOVERN

POLICE HUNT HAIR "SNIPPER"

Because of the alarm of mothers of little children at the activity of "Jack the Snipper" every policeman in Greater Boston is on the watch to-day for the offender.

The latest victim, Mary McGovern, thirteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh McGovern of No. 7 Bloomington street, Neponset, told an AMERICAN reporter to-day how the snipper had spoiled her beautiful brown hair. She is the fourth girl to have her hair snipped off within the last few days.

Mary is a pupil at the Minot Street School, and she had the distinction of having the prettiest hair in the district. In two long curls it hung down her back, and she was proud of it. She is a brave girl, however, and instead of crying is boasting that it will grow out again as beautiful and long as ever.

Attacked by Snipper.

"I was on my way home about five o'clock in the afternoon when the man cut off my hair," said Mary. "I was on Tolman street, not far from Bloomington street, where I live. It was only a little more than a block from my home. I was alone and there were few persons on the street.

"The man grabbed my curls, and pulling a pair of long scissors from under his coat cut off my hair right at the neck. I was too frightened to scream and there was no one around to help me.

"Without having said a word, the man ran down Tolman street toward the railroad tracks. I stood there for a minute, too frightened to move. Then I screamed and people came rushing toward me. But by this time the man had got out of sight.

"He pulled my hair quite hard, but he did not hurt me much. I had fine hair and it ran away down my back. It will be a long time before it grows out again, but it will in time. So I am not worrying. I hope they catch the man."

Mothers Alarmed.

The girl chums of Mary are afraid that "Jack the Snipper" will get them, too, and every time they see a strange man they get a safe distance from him. The same fear prevails among girls in other parts of the city where the snipper has been at work, and several mothers have complained to the police for protection for their children.

The police are somewhat handicapped by the inability of the children to describe their assailants. For instance, Mary says the snipper was a tall man, twenty years old, with light hair and a black moustache.

Just how many "Jack the Snippers" are at work the police do not know. Nor do they know whether they are after the girls' hair because it is valuable or simply because they have a mania for that kind of deviltry.

VEILED BEAUTY TO BE A BRIDE

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—A mysterious woman in black caused great gossip on La Savoie, which came into port after a tumultuous trip that included an eighty-five-mile-an-hour hurricane Wednesday evening. She was known to her shipmates as Mme. M. Rue, but probably was Mrs. Marie Van Rensimer Barnes Creel—styled one of the most beautiful women in the world—and she did not appear on deck during the stormy journey.

To women, in the seclusion of the music room, she confided that she was to be married to G. H. Mumm, Jr. of Paris.

Posed for Many Artists.

"Mr. Mumm is 6 feet 2 inches tall and the handsomest man in the world, and I am happy," said the pink-and-white, blue-eyed young woman.

"Why don't you appear on deck?" was asked.

"Because," she answered naively, "I am so beautiful I attract too much attention."

When she left La Savoie at the pier Mme. Rue, or Mrs. Creel, was dressed entirely in black, with a veil closely screening her face. A smooth-faced man escorted her away. On the trip she told a stewardess that when young she had posed for artists as one of the most beautiful of girls. She "swore off" $15,000 in jewels and furs yesterday.

"I have never heard of Mr. Mumm," she said on the pier. "I do not know Mr. Mumm. That question, if I am going to marry Mr. Mumm, has been asked me before."

Sisters Look Alike.

Captain Tourette said Mme. M. Rue was the young woman who was photographed on the top of La Savoie when the ship sailed hence Nov. 2. The captain thought she was Mrs. Harry Lehr, but discovered his mistake.

The woman of unusual beauty who wept hysterically as she sailed that day was Mrs. Henri Van Rensimer Barnes Creel. She said she was going to London to try to divorce George Henri Creel, a rich Chilian of the same family as Enrique C. Creel, at one time Minister to America.

As she sailed that day the man who met her yesterday bade her good-by soothingly and forced upon her a bunch of chrysanthemums.

Whenever Mrs. Creel is in New York she stops with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Van Rensimer, at No. 209 West Seventy-fifth street. A golden-haired young woman faced a reporter at that house to-day.

"I arrived on the Lusitania two days ago," said she, "and I am Mrs. Creel, not Mrs. Rue. Mrs. Rue is my sister. She has gone to her home in Canada. I will not tell you her husband's name, address or business. My sister and I look alike."

MRS. G. H. CREEL, WHO, IT IS SAID, IS SOON TO MARRY

New York beauty is reported to be engaged to G. H. Mumm, Jr., of Paris, "the world's handsomest man."

RINDGES SAVE LIVES IN FIRE

Dispatches from Los Angeles to-day tell how Mrs. Mary K. Rindge, widow of Frederick H. Rindge, the Cambridge philanthropist, and other members of the Rindge family pumped a handcar over the Rindge estate railroad for miles, until stopped by heavy sand, in an effort to warn ranches of forest fires.

Braving death, Mrs. May K. Rindge, owner of the great $4,000,000 Rindge estate; her son Frederick and the latter's wife, accompanied by Samuel Rindge and his wife, stuck to the handcar with the spirit of a modern Paul Revere.

"With Mrs. May K. Rindge's hands blistered and raw from the unusual work, the three Mrs. Rindges were aiding the two men at the handcar's pump handle," said Fire Warden Clifton, who told the story of the bravery of the three women and two men when the party passed them, after shouting to them to warn such ranchers as they met to take every precaution possible as the flames were fast eating their way over the Rindge ranch.

Six lives were lost and many others submerged, numerous fire fighters injured, two perhaps fatally; a dozen mountain ranchers' homes destroyed, a property loss estimated at $500,000, and a line of fire twenty miles long and spreading in many directions, summarizes the fire situation in the Santa Monica range of mountains.

MATTAPAN CITIZENS WANT CAR RESTORED

A large body of citizens, representing various organizations, in Mattapan, will attend a meeting on Friday afternoon before the Railroad Commissioners in regard to the restoring of the Columbia road car service direct to Mattapan square and to change the present transfer system at Franklin Field. The transfer system at that point was inaugurated in July at request of the Railroad Commissioners, at the same time the Elevated Company took off the North Station-Mattapan square-Columbia road car.

THANKSGIVING DAY

There is no one in the whole land whose heart does not glow and quicken at the thought of Thanksgiving Day.

The turkey, with its "fixins" and cranberry sauce—the fresh, crisp, home-made apple and pumpkin pies and rich New England plum pudding, are, so to speak, the emblems of Thanksgiving Day—the day of days devoted to the inner man. Outside, the sharp, crisp weather—within the blaze of crackling logs—content and comfort everywhere, and good-will to men.

For every occasion in the early days, the Pilgrim and Puritan was forced to import from abroad his ingredients for the Thanksgiving "cup that cheers"—but we are under no such painful necessity. In the heart of the market district, at the Distillery Liquor Store, 149 Blackstone street (on ground settled and lived upon by Puritans), you may find the complement of your Thanksgiving Dinner in Doane's XXXX Rye—the leading whiskey on the market at seventy-five cents a quart. Mail orders or telephone promptly filled.

Not Bleached

That creamy-white flour in Gold Medal bags is just as Nature made it.

No chemicals have touched it—

The flour is not bleached.

But that flour, Mrs. Housewife, is just the heart of choice wheat.

It isn't the whole flour—

It's the cream of the flour.

It is sifted ten times, through ten sheets of fine silk, to pick out the daintiest particles.

That's the secret of it.

To get the cream only, say "Gold Medal Flour." It costs you nothing extra.

Then you get the flour which has come to outsell every other flour in existence.

If you paid $10 a sack for it, no man could supply you a choicer flour than this.

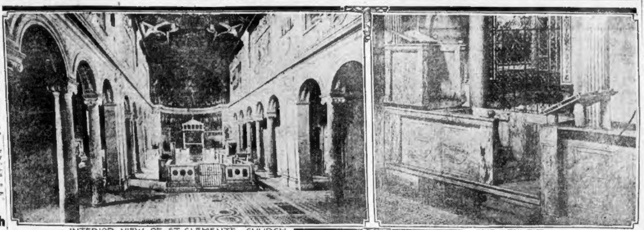
POPE PIUS CREATES 18 CARDINALS AT IMPOSING CHURCH CEREMONY

Three Americans Made Cardinals at Important Consistory in Rome.

William H. O'Connell of Boston Among Those Honored by Pope To-day.



INTERIOR VIEW OF ST CLEMENTS CHURCH — THE PULPIT

To-day's ceremony constituted the secret consistory. The public one will be held a few days later. From the standpoint of the church and of the Cardinals-designate, the secret Consistory is the all-important period of the entire occasion.

The spiritual preparations were embraced in the special prayers, the self-communings and the offerings of humble thanks which each cardinal-designate, by the very nature of his being and calling, could not fail to hold.

Wear Red Cassock.

The bulk of the material preparations for each candidate was arranged, of course, by members of his suite and his personal attendants. The sacred regalia for the ceremony was carefully provided—and at a considerable expense and pains, too.

Each cardinal has two sets of robes, one for solemn occasions and one for ordinary wear. The robes for solemn occasions, like a consistory or other notable event, include the red cassock of soft broadcloth sweeping the ground, a short lace rochet, a red cap, gold buckled shoes, red hose, red gloves and, particularly significant of office, the red hat.

Dressed in this beautiful and costly attire the cardinals-designate sat in their respective apartments to-day, surrounded by personal friends and awaiting the formal summons to the Vatican.

Cardinal-designate O'Connell of Boston received his formal summons at the royal suite in the Hotel Quirinal, where he is quartered for his stay here.

Cardinal-designate Farley is lodged at the Hotel Bristol. The other archbishops, bishops and Monsignors among the cardinalate nominees are similarly lodged at the hostelries, except the few like Monsignor Bisleti, the Papal Major Domo, and others whose ecclesiastical details have kept them attached to the Vatican household.

Meanwhile a score or more of cardinals living in Rome prepared for their part of the day. They were driven to the Vatican in their two-horse closed carriage, the style of vehicle prescribed for a prince of the church under the severe rules which regulate his life. In Rome there are many restrictions upon the actions of a cardinal. For instance, he may not leave the confines of the Eternal City without express permission of the Vatican.

With a half-hour of the time set for the actual ceremony the Cardinals and Cardinals-designate assembled in the Hall of the Consistory of the Vatican. There they awaited the arrival of the Pontiff.

Await Coming of Pope.

Before the Pontiff was actually within the hall the awaiting princes and princes-to-be broke up into three groups. In one were the Cardinal-Archbishops, in a second the Cardinal-Priests, in the third the Cardinal-Deacons, standing according to precedence. Behind them were the Archbishops, Bishops, heads of great congregations and other high personages, to attend the opening of the secret consistory. Thus they awaited the coming of the Pontiff, Pius X.

The Pontiff entered the Hall of the Consistory robed in white, surrounded by his impressive entourage and escorted by the Noble and Swiss Guards.

On the entrance of the Pontiff the consistory ceremonies began with the following sacred program:

As the Pontiff entered every one else knelt. Extending the papal blessing over the gathering the Pontiff ascended the pontifical throne. Then began the long ceremony of kissing the Pope's hand, long on account of the great number present. At the conclusion of this salutation the papal master of ceremonies cleared the hall of everyone except the Cardinals and the Cardinals-designate.

The ceremony, which will go down in history as one of the most significant of the ecclesiastical period, proceeded in secret solemnity.

The Pope offered a brief prayer, followed by his allocution or formal address to the Sacred College.

Affirm the Nominations.

Then the names of the Cardinals-designate, the nominees for elevation to rank of Prince of the Church, were read. But this was a ritualistic formality. As a matter of fact the Cardinals are not expected to reply to his query. The Cardinals merely raised their red hats at each query, thus signifying their affirmation of the Pontiff's nomination.

Thus ended what will doubtless prove the chief administrative event in the career of Pius X. He will be known to the world, to all Catholics and especially to those in America, as the Pontiff who created eighteen new Cardinals at one consistory, and who increased four-fold the American representation in the Sacred College.

American citizens, both within and without the faith, have pleaded for Cardinal Gibbons to be relieved of the vast burden upon his shoulders by appointment of more Cardinals. This wish was gratified at to-day's consistory.

But the nomination of two more Americans to the cardinalate in the persons of Archbishop Farley of New York and Archbishop O'Connell of Boston is regarded by the American colony at Rome as particularly gratifying.

Reasons of State made this consistory one of note, too. It comes at a time when Italy, of which Rome is the capital, is at war with Turkey in a momentous struggle. This war recalls the struggles of the Crusades, when all Christendom was banded together to resist the infidel.

Rome Now Crowded.

The effect of the consistory upon the Eternal City is noticeable as a matter of course. The city is overflowing with visitors. The hotels are jammed. Everywhere are indications of the ecclesiastical event which calls the hierarchy of the church together. The carriages of the Cardinals pass through the streets. Messengers from the Vatican hurry from place to place, carrying notices and communications. All the notable Catholics in Italy are in Rome for the two consistories. With their families and suites they make imposing array.

Tourists flock innumerable, Americans predominating. In fact, the American element transcends every other in Rome now except the native Italian. Even the non-Catholic Americans call proud attention to the fact that three of their fellow-countrymen are participating in the ceremonial of the Hall of the Consistory this year.

As for the Bostonians and New Yorkers, some of whom are members of the suites of Cardinals-Designate Farley and O'Connell, they are filled with enthusiasm over the occasion.

The press of the world is represented here. The leading British and continental dailies have their special representatives on the scene—men who stand high in the estimation of the church authorities. A few American publications, even—those of leading enterprise—have sent staff correspondents here to report the consistory and its features.

While the consistory is one of the last functions in the world in which the feminine element is concerned, yet the number of women here is noticeable. Magnificent toilets are seen in the hotel dining rooms and salons.

Of all the people in Rome to-day probably the busiest are the telegraph operators. Every wire, cable and wireless office is literally swamped with messages. The bulk of these are incoming congratulations to the Cardinals-designate from all over the ecclesiastical globe.

Congratulate Americans.

The most of these congratulations come from Italy to the Italian nominees. But, of the foreign messages, the greater part by far come from the United States, addressed to Cardinals-Designate Farley, Falconio and O'Connell.

The messages come from people in all walks of life, from rulers down to humble citizens, from Catholics and non-Catholics, from men, women and children.

A typical cablegram to Cardinal-designate O'Connell reads:

> Congratulations, Your Eminence, our sincere and confident hope is that to-day's event only marks a beginning of greater era in your wonderful life of good to the Church, America and all mankind. Felicitations, Your Eminence.

Choir Congratulates Cardinal

The following cablegram was sent to-day by the Cathedral Sanctuary Choir to His Eminence Cardinal O'Connell:

> His Eminence William, Cardinal O'Connell, Hotel Quirinal, Rome:
> Your Sanctuary Choir felicitates you on this blessed day.
> JOSEPH F. COOK.
> FRANK E. DONNELLY.

The Cathedral Sanctuary Choir, a pet institution of the Cardinal's, is the pioneer Sanctuary Choir and most famous in the country.

Founded on Christmas eve, 1872, by Madame de la Motte, a noted musician and singer of the time, it was carefully developed by her, and its reputation for accurate interpretation and splendid rendition of the church music rapidly became known all over the country.

Some idea of the magnitude of its work can be gotten in considering its library of the best compositions in the world of Catholic church music, consisting of over 3,500 motetts and nearly 600 masses.

The Cardinal, who is a musician of no little note, has from time to time made valuable suggestions to the choir which have been eagerly sought and taken advantage of.

At the present time the choir, of eighty-five carefully selected voices, is under the leadership of J. Frank Driscoll, who is assisted by Frank E. Donnelly and Joseph F. Cook as soloists.

POPE PIUS X ACCORDS UNUSUAL HONORS TO PARTY OF CARDINAL

ROME, Italy, Nov. 27.—Most unusual honors are being showered upon Cardinal O'Connell and his party of Boston visitors by Pope Pius X. In words and act His Holiness shows the high regard in which he holds the New England cardinal and the esteem he feels for Catholic Boston.

In no way has this been more pronounced than in the audience granted the Boston men by Pius X. It is described in Rome as being one of the most remarkable occurrences of recent years, and some attach to it a significance not commonly given to occasions of the kind.

Many have been accorded audiences with the Pope; few have been received with such a show of honor as were the Boston men in Cardinal O'Connell's suite and those who accompanied them. Even the place of the audience is commented on as having a meaning. It was given in the private room next the Pope's apartments, the same in which Kaiser Wilhelm of Prussia and Edward VII were received by Leo XIII. Only those for whom His Holiness has the utmost affection or to whom he wishes to show especial honor are accorded such marked attention.

No less remarkable was the audience itself. Archbishop-Cardinal O'Connell was first received in private by the Pope, the two remaining closeted for about twenty minutes. Then they entered the chamber where the Cardinal's suite and the others accompanying the party to Rome waited.

Pius X. leaned on the arm of Cardinal O'Connell, and as he approached with a smile extended his hand to each of the visitors. He paid a great tribute to Archbishop O'Connell, and in a speech told the visitors that he and the Church regarded Boston as the greatest Catholic city of America.

The Rev. Edward J. Moriarty, of St. Peter's Church, Cambridge, in the name of the clergymen of the party, thanked the Pope for the honor accorded them.

Forty in Audience.

Arriving at the Vatican Palace, Cardinal O'Connell was first escorted to the presence of the Holy Father. He was conducted to the throne room by Mgr. Bisletti, the papal master of the ceremonies, and the chamberlains to the Pope and his audience with Pope Pius continued for twenty minutes.

Following the private audience of Cardinal O'Connell with Pope Pius X, the other members of the party were then escorted to the Holy Father and all knelt down and received the blessing of the Pope. Each one of the party was then granted the privilege of kissing the papal ring.

The Boston party reached the Vatican just before 10 o'clock, as the audience had been fixed for that hour. The laymen of the party were, in accordance with custom, in full dress, while the women were black with black mantillas.

When the Boston visitors had made their act of obeisance to the Holy Father, one of Cardinal O'Connell's suite, Rt. Rev. Edward J. Moriarty of St. Peter's Church, Cambridge, addressed the Holy Father on behalf of the visitors and the clergy of the Boston diocese.

Monsignor Moriarty Spoke.

Monsignor Moriarty spoke of the distinction and honor that all of the people of Boston felt over the elevation of their prelate to the Cardinalate. He conveyed the thanks of the Boston diocesan clergy to the Holy Father.

Pope Pius X. listened with deepest interest to the words of Monsignor Moriarty, and replied:

"My heart profoundly rejoices at seeing you all, who have come such a great distance in order that you may pay this tribute of love and devotion, as representatives of the church in Boston, which is one of the greatest Catholic cities in the world.

"The American people are true and have always shown their loyalty. You as well as those in Boston and in America honor me by honoring Cardinal O'Connell, who is dear to my heart.

"America is the hope of the church in the future years. The country has progressed well and will continue to move forward. Heaven will reward this fidelity that is ever being shown. I give to you who are here and to those who are at home, my sincere thanks and upon all I invoke God's blessing for being such faithful friends."

Pope Gave Blessing.

With these words the Holy Father raised his hands heavenward and solemnly pronounced his benediction upon the Church and its people in the Boston diocese.

Pope Pius X. gave every evidence of being in splendid health. While one was able to detect a slight stoop of the shoulders, there was nothing to indicate anything but the best of physical condition. His every step and movement were firm and showed that he was strong. The large eyes of the Holy Father were brilliant and had a good, clear color.

In his every act the Sovereign Pontiff was simple and dignified. His countenance was frequently lightened up with a smile and there was every outward evidence that he was most happy and well pleased with what he saw and heard.

The Pope wore his white cassock and from the golden chain about his neck was suspended the pectoral cross of gold that stood out strikingly upon his white robe.

After the Holy Father had given his benediction he went along the corridor in the direction of his study.

A Reasonable Plea For The Stomach

If Your Stomach Is Lacking in Digestive Power, Why Not Help the Stomach Do Its Work—Especially When It Costs Nothing to Try?

Not with drugs, but with a reinforcement of digestive agents, such as are naturally at work in the stomach? Scientific analysis shows that digestion requires pepsin, nitrogenous ferments, and the secretion of hydrochloric acid. When your food fails to digest, it is proof positive that some of these agents are lacking in your digestive apparatus.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets contain nothing but these natural elements necessary to digestion and when placed at work in the weak stomach and small intestines, supply what these organs need. They stimulate the gastric glands and gradually bring the digestive organs back to their normal condition.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets have been subjected to critical chemical tests at home and abroad and are found to contain nothing but natural digestives.

I have analyzed most carefully a box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets (which I bought myself at a city chemist's shop for the purpose), manufactured by the F. A. Stuart Co., 86 Clerkenwell Road, London, E. C., and have to report that I cannot find any trace of vegetable or mineral poisons. Knowing the ingredients of the tablets I am of opinion that they are admirably adaptable for the purpose for which they are intended.

John R. Brooke, F. I. C., F. C. S.

There is no secret in the preparation of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. Their composition is commonly known among physicians, as is shown by the recommendations of 40,000 licensed physicians in the United States and Canada. They are the most popular of all remedies for indigestion, dyspepsia, water brash, insomnia, loss of appetite, melancholia, constipation, dysentery and kindred diseases originating from improper dissolution and assimilation of foods, because they are thoroughly reliable and harmless to man or child.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are at once a safe and a powerful remedy, one grain of these tablets being strong enough (by test) to digest 3,000 grains of steak, eggs and other foods. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest your food for you when your stomach can't.

HUGHES WINS BIG AUTO RACE

the start was made in the Tiedeman event for small cars.

The Tiedeman trophy race was at 1770 miles 10 laps at the course and was for cars of the Class C division 2C, 161, 230 cubic inches piston displacement. The prize is the possession for a year of the Tiedeman trophy and $1,000. The machines got away in the following order:

No. 31, Abbott-Detroit—Roberts.
No. 32, Abbott-Detroit—Hartman.
No. 33, E. M. F.—Tower.
No. 34, E. M. F.—Evans
No. 35—E. M. F.—Witt
No. 36, Ford—Kalick.

The weather was slightly misty, but the track was in perfect condition. Thousands of visitors were in the city for the races, nearly 100,000 seeing the start.

Foreigners Favored.

The foreign drivers loomed up ominously in the Vanderbilt cup event, with Ralph de Palma the favorite in the betting. Preparations were made for an especial system of timing during the first 200 miles of the Vanderbilt cup, as the teams started out to break the world's record at 74.6 miles an hour, established at the Santa Monica (California) track recently.

The Case, driven by Disbrow, led on the first lap in the Savannah trophy event with a time of 14:10 for the seventeen miles, which is at a rate of about seventy-two miles an hour, nearly ten miles an hour faster than was made by the winner last year.

Roberts in the Lead.

In the Tiedeman event the Abbott-Detroit, driven by Roberts, led for the first lap with its teammate second. Roberts's time for the lap was 16 2-3, which is at the rate of about sixty-one miles an hour. The race was won last year at a rate of 58.44 miles an hour.

Kalick's Ford made the first stop at the pits. With four laps of the Savannah Challenge Trophy event reeled off and 68.56 miles covered, the Case car, driven by Disbrow, was in a comfortable lead. Hughes's Mercer was second and Barnes's Mercer third. The time of the leader was 59:23.

At the end of the third lap of the Tiedeman Trophy event, with the race three-tenths over, the Abbott-Detroit car, with Mort Roberts driving with the leader, was first, its time for the 51.42 miles being 49:17. Witt was second.

Cars 24 and 26 made stops at the pits at 9:20. The Mercer was away quickly, but Disbrow's speedy Case, which led to that point, was held up ten minutes while the crew tinkered with the engine, and was finally backed off the track.

When the half-way mark of five laps, which meant 85.70 miles, was reached in the Tiedeman trophy event, Roberts in the Abbott was the leader. He covered the distance in 82:29.

The other cars were strung out in the following order: Witt's E. M. F.; Evans' E. M. F.; Kulick's Ford. Bartman's Abbott had not been reported since the first lap and the officials could not find it. The leader's time was about 52 miles an hour. At the seventh lap of the Tiedeman, the E. M. F. cars were one, two, three, with nothing to worry them but Kulick's car.

Billy Knipper's chance for the Savannah Challenge Trophy went glimmering at the end of his eighth lap, when he had engine trouble and was hung up at the pits. Barnes's Mercer made his eighth lap in 14:11, at an average of about seventy-two miles an hour. The bunting on the front of the boxes caught fire at 18:25, but the flames were quickly extinguished. At 10:40 a. m. Knipper in his Mercer was reported out of the race on account of engine trouble.

The average time for the E-M-F that won the Tiedman trophy was 58:34 miles an hour, ten seconds better than the Lancia's time last year.

The average time of the winning Mercer in the Savannah challenge was 68.35 miles an hour, five miles an hour better than Dawson's Marmon did last year.

BICYCLE RIDERS TO SHARE IN RECEIPTS

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—A radical change has been made in the arrangements for this year's six-day bicycle races at Madison Square Garden, December 10 to 16. Instead of riding for a fixed sum of prize money, as in all previous races there, the riders are to receive a percentage of the gate receipts. They have been clamoring for such an arrangement for several years and, as almost all other professional athletic sports are conducted along these lines, the management decided to give it a trial. There will be seven prizes, as in previous years, and the money winners will receive a percentage based along the lines of the former division of the purse. This arrangement cannot help but work for the better interests of the race, it is claimed, as it will do away with the large bonuses some of the riders have received in the past and will make each individual team go out and fight for a share of the prize money.

BASKETBALL RULES COMMITTEE TO MEET

The Collegiate Basketball Rules Committee will hold a meeting in Columbia University gymnasium on Saturday afternoon, December 2, for the purpose of interpreting the rules for the coming season. Coaches, managers, captains, players, referees, umpires and scorers from most every Eastern college have been invited to be present.

The meeting will be in charge of Dr. Joseph E. Raycroft, chairman of the committee, formerly of the University of Chicago, but now of Princeton. Other members of the committee who will be present are Oswald Tower, Williams; Lieutenant P. D. Glassford, West Point; Dr. A. H. Sharpe, Yale; Harry A. Fisher, Columbia, and Ralph Morgan, of Pennsylvania.

BATTERY A TO MEET CADETS ON GRIDIRON

The annual football game between the First Corps Cadets and Battery A will be held in the Harvard Stadium on Thanksgiving morning at 10:30 o'clock. Over 20,000 invitations have been issued for the game. The First Corps team has been practicing regularly, and the squad comprises many old college players. The corps team has been coached by Frank Boyd of Harvard 1902, a member of the corps; Leo Leary of the Harvard coaching staff and Stow of this season's Harvard squad. Section six of the First Corps side has been reserved for a cheering section, and songs and cheers have been rehearsed after the drills of the company the past week. A mass meeting will be held in the Armory the night before the game.

COOK TO RUN BRUCE AT QUINCY TO-NIGHT

John J. Cook, New England amateur ten mile champion, will meet Frank Bruce of Quincy in a special race of five miles at the Quincy Coliseum to-night. The race will be held under the auspices of the Italian-American A. A. of Quincy, of which Bruce is a member.

The greatest day of the schoolboy football season comes next Thursday. Thanksgiving is the day set for many important annual battles, and this year will be no exception. A long list of games is on the schedule and some great battles are anticipated.

That day will be the climax of the season for the greater part of the school teams, but several of the teams have post-season games to be played next Saturday, and games are pending for the Saturday of December 9. Great crowds turn out for the holiday games, and the coffers of every school is given a big boost. Most of the games will be played in the morning.

It is hard to pick the best attraction. All of the schoolboy players are in their very best condition for the games, and all hands will be prepared to fight from start to finish.

All of the football that has been drilled into the teams for the ten long weeks of the season will be shown in the holiday game, and the followers of the teams will see them work at their very best.

So late in the season all of the plays and formations have been perfected, and the teams are running smoothly both on the defence and offence, and many upsets are likely.

The Malden-Medford game to be played at Medford will receive more attention this year than usual. The fact that the result of this game will decide the championship of the Suburban League has a lot to do with the amount of interest that is being shown throughout the State.

Both these teams are among the leaders in the eastern part of the State, and each team has a chance to win the championship of the league. To date both schools have won two and lost one league game, so both teams will have something worth while to fight about.

Malden Is Strong.

Medford High is the slight favorite, but the players are not any too confident. It is only too well known how Coach Charlie Cuddy's team can upset all predictions. The game between Malden and Somerville is still in the minds of every Medford player, and they know that they will have to fight to the limit in order to bring home the bacon.

Malden defeated Somerville in a hard game, by two touchdowns and Somerville was a two to one favorite before the game started. Although Malden did not play such a strong game the week following against Everett, Coach Cuddy has his boys back in good shape, and they will give the Medford boys a lot of trouble.

Medford will have the services of Captain Brawley in the game, and that is a big asset. Brawley was injured in the game against Everett several weeks ago, and has been out of the game since, but he is back in good condition and will be ready to put up a hard game.

Brawley is one of the scrappiest players on the schoolboy gridiron, and his pluck and hard playing has proved to be a big asset for the Medford team. He is a good leader and his return strengthens the team both defensively and offensively.

Malden will be, however, without the services of Twombly, a member of the backfield. Bearse, who has played in the last two games, is a good man, however, and he should show up well.

The rest of the Medford team will remain the same as played in the game against Somerville and Everett. The team has been working hard with several plays this past two weeks that they expected will prove to be successful against Malden. The players are confident that they will have at least an even chance of winning, and they will go into the battle determined to win.

Coach Cuddy Is Confident.

The Malden team has been coming along at a good speed since its defeat in the hands of Everett, and Coach Cuddy expects his charges to spring another surprise as they did against Somerville.

The annual game between Somerville and Rindge Technical will again be a big attraction. The first annual game played between these schools was in 1898 at the Charles River Park, Cambridge, and ever since this game has been a holiday fixture.

Somerville has a wide margin in the games won, having defeated Rindge in six annual battles and five games have been tied, and Rindge has been victorious in but two games.

Somerville was defeated in 1902 and again in 1910, and the Cambridge boys are hopeful of duplicating last year's feat. This will be the fourteenth annual game, and as much interest as ever is being displayed by the followers of the two schools.

Somerville is the strong favorite, but the Rindge backers are not predicting a defeat. The game should be close and hard fought, and a large crowd will turn out.

The usual big crowd will turn out for the Boston Latin-English High game at the American League Grounds. The game will be called at 10 a. m. The Warren Avenue boys are the favorites, and hope to win the game as they did last year.

Last year the Latin boys won through the kicking abilities of Mal Logan, the quarterback, who kicked three beautiful goals from the field.

For City Championship.

This game will also decide the team that will have the right to claim the schoolboy championship of the city, and this adds much interest to the annual affair. Mechanic Arts and the High School of Commerce teams have been eliminated from the race, and these teams will fight it out for high honors.

Newton and Brookline meet for the second time this season at Newton, and this should prove to be one of the biggest holiday attractions. The boys of the wealthy town have a little 3 to 0 game to square up, and the players will go into the game determined to do so. The bitterest rivalry exists between these neighboring towns, and the game should be one of the hardest fought of the season.

The teams are about evenly matched, and it should be a toss up from the start. The team that gets the jump will prove to be the winner. Both teams have individual stars who have to be watched throughout the game and the players of both sides will have to be alert at all times.

Waltham and Cambridge Latin are down for a merry battle at Waltham. Waltham has played more games this season and have made a better record than the Cantabs, and are the logical favorites.

The game will be hard fought, however, and will be a good attraction. Both teams have some heavy men, and much old-time football will be played.

The big annual game of the North Shore will be played when Salem and Beverly clash at Salem. This game has reached such a stage of importance to the two teams that the schoolboys have been put on a training table just like the teams of the biggest college elevens.

The Beverly High boys will go into strict training table to-day, and the players will be kept in strict obscurity till the time of battle. Much rivalry exists between these two schools and everything in football will be tried by the teams in order to win.

Everett Versus Chelsea.

Everett High plays Chelsea at Everett, and they should be the winners by a good score. The Everett team will outweigh the Chelsea team to a man, and should be able to crush them. Melrose plays Revere at Melrose, and a good game is anticipated.

A game that is causing much attention is booked for Natick when Milton High and Natick clash. These teams are about the speediest lightweight teams on the gridiron this season. The Milton team has not been defeated this season, and are hopeful of completing the season without a black mark.

The teams are evenly matched in weight. Both teams have individual stars and the game should be a battle of strategy. Both teams have exceptionally clever quarterbacks, and it should be a pretty fight between these men for supremacy.

The Milton followers are confident that their team will prove to be the victors, and they will invade the town several hundred strong. Several automobile trucks have been engaged, as well as a special car to bring the rooters up into their foe's territory.

Thanksgiving Day is also a great day for the alumni teams. Many schools will have their former players for attractions, and some good games will be played. The comebacks in many of the towns are big favorites. In spite of the fact that the teams lack practice and team work, they will outweigh their opponents. Woburn, Arlington, Brockton, Concord, Newburyport, Plymouth, Abington and many other schools will play alumni teams.

The proposed game between a strong school team of Greater Boston and the Oak Park High School of Chicago to be played next Saturday is causing much discussion, and such a battle would surely be welcomed.

The Chicago team has raised the necessary money to more than pay a team's expenses, and tickets have already been issued and put on sale for a Boston attraction. It is expected that Everett will get the date, but Somerville, Waltham and Dean Academy are being considered.

The games Thursday will not wind up the local season, however, as several post season games of great importance are pending, and there is a strong possibility that the season will be extended to December 9.

MICHIGAN MAY DROP ITS GAME WITH PENN

CHICAGO, Nov. 27.—That Michigan is preparing to return to the Western conference is the persistent report reaching Chicago University. It is believed here that a week ago last Saturday's game is the last the Wolverines will play with Pennsylvania.

The report of Michigan's re-entry into the big eight of the West is founded on the assumption that Michigan, Chicago and Minnesota will effect a sort of combination of interests in the conference and practically dominate it. In this way a change in the eligibility rules such as Minnesota has been demanding would be forced and Michigan would undoubtedly try to gain the post of conference champion—a position of definite standing in the football world. Just now the Wolverines hold an anomalous standing

ST. JOHN'S PREP CLAIMS TITLE

The St. John's Preparatory School of Danvers is one of the many claimants to the State gridiron championship this season. The team has not been defeated this season, having been tied once by the Haverhill High School. On Thanksgiving Day it tackles the strong Boston College High eleven at the Dunbar Avenue Grounds and will try its hardest to keep a clean slate.

The St. John's eleven is represented by one of the fastest schoolboy teams in the State. Starting in with some good veteran material, Coach George W. Jones, Jr., of Holy Cross, has developed some very speedy youngsters to round out the fastest eleven Essex County has had for several years.

The team is exceptionally active, the backfield consisting of McCarthy, quarterback; Devlin, left half back; Towle, full back; and Joyce, right half back.

The championship of Essex County already has been won by the St. John's boys, Salem High and Beverly High, its strongest contestants for the honor, falling easy victims, the former 28 to 0 and the latter 22 to 3.

Captain Doherty played quarterback last year, but is putting up a wonderful game at right end this season. Though weighing but 134, he is one of the best schoolboy ends of the year.

The other extremity of the line is guarded by Woods, who is having his first year's experience at football, but is a strong defensive and offensive player.

The forwards are: Tackles, Barry and Troy; guards, Mulcahey and Flanagan; centre, Sheehan. The ability of this quartette is evidenced by the difficulty opponents have had to make their distance and the easy time St. John's have had in running up scores.

WESLEYAN LOSES TWO BASKETBALL PLAYERS

Although last year's championship basketball team still remains intact at Wesleyan University, it is doubtful if three of the members will be in the game this Winter. One of the college rules prevents students from playing more than two varsity teams and this fact may keep Laggren and Crane out of basketball while Parkinson, the big center, is not likely to be eligible. The regulars left are Captain Davidson, Harward and Pettigrue but the freshman class offers some unusually good material. Eaton, the star of the Westfield High School five last year, and McKenzie and Pickles, two former members of the Wesleyan Academy team, are among the candidates. Thus early, the indications point toward Wesleyan and Williams again being rivals for the New England title this Winter.

Amateur Football

It is doubtful whether Pete Driscoll, the star tackle of the Cunningham Gym team, will get into the Thanksgiving Day game for the Milton lads. Pete was badly shaken up in the game with the U. S. S. Rhode Island over a month ago and may not play again this season. The team will miss his services as he is one of the best tackles ever developed at the Milton Gym.

O'Gara's Indians are fast rounding into shape for their game with the Knights of St. John the Baptist which will be played at the City Field, Somerville, on Thanksgiving Day. The annual battle between these two teams has been very close and it is expected that a large crowd will attend, as it will be played in the afternoon and will not conflict with the Somerville-Rindge game.

The Crawford A. C. of Roxbury have still to be defeated and lay claim to the Midget championship of the State. Would like to hear from the fastest teams in the State at that weight, especially the St. Joseph Midgets of Somerville and the Royal A. C. of Medford. Manager Edward Whelan, No. 58 Crawford street, Roxbury.

The Franklin A. C. of Somerville is anxious to hear from some of the fastest 115-120-pound teams in the State. The lineup is as follows: O'Leary, l. e.; Moran, l. t.; McDonald, l. g.; Spires, c.; Horgan, r. g.; Arnold, r. t.; Harrington, r. e.; Kelly, q. b.; Calnan, l. h. b.; Murdoch, r. h. b.; Hayden, f. b. Manager Timothy Calnan, No. 74 Franklin street, East Somerville.

The Westerville A. A. has an open date Thanksgiving morning at home and would like to hear from fast 110-pound teams for those dates. Half expenses given. Manager F. A. Keenan, No. 157 Westerville street, Dorchester.

The Medford Midgets would like to arrange a game for Thanksgiving afternoon at home with some strong 90-95-pound team. The St. Joseph Midgets of Somerville preferred. Manager Edward Anderson, No. 83 Parks street, Medford.

The success of the Cunningham Gym team during the past season is greatly due to the fine work of its quarterback, Harry Ward. He runs off his plays in fine style and his judgment is of the very best. Harry has been playing a good defensive game and his tackling has been a feature of the year.

$2.50 in merchandise or $2.00 in cash will be given for filled Legal Stamp books at Wolf's, "My Clothier," corner Hanover and Portland Streets.

Great Interest Being Shown in Boxing Game

By JACK CONWAY.

BOXING MATCHES ON CARD TO-NIGHT

Young Yelle vs. Tommy Rawson at Fall River.
Tommy Carson vs. Frank Dubois at Newburyport.
Jimmy Quinlan vs. Lawrence Tommy Murphy at Rockland, Me.
K. O. Brown vs. Bert Keyes at New Haven.
Leach Cross vs. Battling Hurley at New York.
Joe Jeanette vs. Morris Harris
Joe eJanette vs. Morris Harris at Brooklyn, N. Y.
Young Ahern vs. Frank Loughrey at New York.
Willie Fitzgerald vs. Young Nitchie at New York.
Philadelphia Jack O'Brien vs. Harry Ramsey at Philadelphia.

With the football season virtually over the boxing game is coming into its own in almost every section of the country. There have been plenty of bouts pulled off during the past few months, but a large majority of them lacked class.

This last statement is more so true in New York than in any other section of the country. The boxing situation in New York is going from bad to worse. It has now got to the place where it is more profitable to be manager of a couple of mediocre boxers than a promoter of a boxing club.

The agitation to permit decisions at bouts still continues. It is claimed that if decisions were given there would be more interest in the sport; that the boxers would fight and not stall, and that real titles could change hands under the shadow of the Singer Building.

These arguments are very carefully drawn up. They listen well as the slang expression goes. But would decisions be perfectly satisfactory in every way in a city like New York?

"Wise" Men Kill Decisions.

When decisions are given they must be given fairly. Past history proves that decisions in New York have not always been given fairly. The "wise" men must be taken into consideration and the would-be fight fans who never wager a cent on a bout unless they are on the inside—that is, unless they have the referee "doctored."

Such things as this have happened before in New York, and they may happen again if referees are permitted to give decisions. If decisions are given on what the boxers do, and not as to how the "wise" men have wagered their money, decisions are an immense advantage to the sport.

The boxing game is now booming out on the coast. The first big bout will be on Thanksgiving Day, when Champion Ad Wolgast and Freddy Welsh clash in a twenty-round bout at the Vernon arena. Wolgast rules a 2 to 1 favorite with the betting fraternity.

The Cadillac farmer has proven time and again that he is one of the greatest lightweights in the ring. During the past eight months he has humbled some of the best lightweights in the world. "One Round" Hogan, Frankie Burns, George Memsic and Owen Moran all wiltered before the fierce onslaught of the Michigan "Wildcat."

Welsh is the former lightweight champion of England and is considered one of the cleverest men in the ring. It is not believed, however, that his cleverness will be able to hold Wolgast in check for twenty rounds. If the Briton falters for a single second in the middle of the fight his cause is lost.

Packey to Meet Murphy.

Another big battle scheduled to be pulled off out on the coast this week is the one between Packey McFarland and Harlem Tommy Murphy. This mill isn't attracting a great deal of interest. It is dimmed by the battle upon the result of which hinges a title.

McFarland should experience little difficulty in defeating Murphy. Several years ago Tommy was ranked among the leading lightweights in the country. But his pugilistic star has now set. Knockout Brown put him to sleep inside of a few minutes.

In order to get a match with Wolgast, the Windy City favorite must give Murphy a bad beating, otherwise Tom Jones's protege will say that Packey lacks class. Wolgast also says that he will not meet McFarland unless given $20,000, win, lose or draw. Ad will likely show his skill for a few paltry dollars less when approached by some promoter.

The fall of the mighty is great. And so it is with Jack Johnson, heavyweight champion of the world. Six months ago the Galveston black landed on the shores of Britain and was welcomed as though he was an uncrowned king. Thousands of people followed the champion wherever he went. Ther was no feeling shown against Johnson because he was a negro. He was a welcome visitor at the most exclusive clubs in the land.

But what a change six months have made in the treatment accorded the "negro prince!" To-day Johnson is known as the retired heavyweight champion of the world. His wealth is rapidly decreasing. His shows are only attended by a corporal's guard. He is the butt for all manner of jokes by the press. In short, Johnson is down and out.

Johnson is not entirely blameless for his present position. His haughty manner and his reckless conduct have caused the greater part of his trouble.

Matt Wells will sail for this country in a few days in order to start training for his bout with Ad Wolgast, which takes place in December. While in this country, the English lightweight champion made a great record, defeating some of the best boys in the East. There are many fight fans who do not believe that the Briton can make 133 pounds and still be strong. He might make this weight and defeat Wolgast in a ten-round encounter, but in a twenty-round bout it would be a different thing. Wells is a very showy boxer, but he doesn't pack much of a wallop.

The Bradford Boat Club has postponed its amateur boxing tournament from December 1 to January 4, 1912, owing to a misunderstanding with the owners of the hall in which the bouts were scheduled to take place. There will be five classes run off at the show, namely 105, 135, 145, 158 and heavyweight class. The manager of the show writes that a large number of entries have been received for all but the heavyweight class and that he hopes to receive the entries of some husky "hopes" within a few weeks.

There is now a movement under way to change the bantamweight and lightweight limits from 116 and 133 pounds to 118 and 135 pounds, respectively. It is believed that by making these two changes in the weight scale that the bouts in these classes will be more interesting, as the boxers will not have to weaken themselves by making weight. Many a fighter has ruined his career by taking off a couple of extra pounds.

A great deal of interest is being displayed in the different fight clubs throughout New England. The shows are usually well attended and the bouts fast and interesting. The small clubs at New Bedford, Lawrence, Lowell, Fall River, Newport, Webster, Adams, Manchester, Newburyport, Thornton, throughout Maine and in other cities and towns are doing more than their part toward developing local boxers.

There should be some tall doings at the Lakeside A. C., Webster, on the night of December 6. Two star bouts of twelve rounds each and a six-round preliminary will be put on. Kid Scaler of Worcester will exchange greetings with Biz Mackey in one of the star bouts. The other will be between Maurice Lemoine of Webster and Jim Williams of Worcester. In the six-round preliminary Young Breault of Southbridge and Kid Foucher will be seen in action.

A good card has been arranged at the Newport Hippodrome for Thanksgiving Day. Tommy Bergin will clash with Demon Young in the main bout of twelve rounds. Harry Meyers will meet Young Boyle in an eight-round semi-final, while Frank Rafferty swaps wallops with Jack Throng in the preliminary.

Young Allen, the colored welterweight of Everett, sends word that he wishes to meet Tom Goodman or any other boy weighing from 142 to 145 pounds. Allen has been in strict training for the past three weeks and is reported as being in the best of condition.

FAMOUS RACE HORSES BURNED TO DEATH

LEXINGTON, Ky., Nov. 27.—In a fire at "Stockwood," the farm of Captain James Williams, at Spring Station, near Versailles, Ky., Governor Gray, winner of the American Derby at Jacksonville, Fla., last Winter and this year's Latonia, Ky., Derby, and County Tax, both geldings, were burned to death. Both horses were winners of big money for Captain Williams on various race tracks in this country as well as Canada. Governor Gray was valued at $25,000 by his owner and County Tax at $20,000. Last Saturday Captain Williams refused $20,000 for Governor Gray. Besides having two Derbies to his credit as a 3-year-old, Governor Gray finished second in the Kentucky Derby, and was in the money in several rich stakes on the Canadian tracks the past Summer. County Tax, also three years old, was a sprinter and his best work was shown in six-furlong races.

INDIANS AFTER BROWN SCALPS

CARLISLE, Nov. 27.—Coach Glen Warner has planned the hardest kind of practice for the Carlisle Indians for to-day and to-morrow, in preparation for the coming game with Brown at Providence on Thanksgiving Day.

Not a player was injured in the game at Baltimore with Johns Hopkins and every first string man will be in the lineup ready to put up a great battle against the Brunonians in the biggest game in the East on the holiday.

Thorpe played but a few minutes in the game Saturday, but he showed that he was in the pink of condition, for in the short time he was in the lineup he made several long runs on skin tackle plays and broke loose three times for long end runs around the clever Hopkins ends.

He also kicked three times, and his three punts averaged fifty-five yards. Coach Glen Warner pulled him out of the game after he had scored the first touchdown.

Great care is being taken to keep every regular in the best of shape to meet the team led by Captain Sprackling, as it has been the ambition of Glen Warner all season to take into camp the elevens of Harvard, Pennsylvania and Brown. To date the Indians have played Harvard and Penn and have come out victorious in both of the contests.

Warner Never Predicts.

Coach Warner will never predict anything as to what his team will do in a game. From his attitude it can easily be seen, however, that he feels certain that his team will go onto Andrews Field in Providence and play the Brown team off its feet.

Warner said earlier in the season that if he were able to get through the season without having Thorpe and several others of his stars injured he would make the Indians the fastest team on the gridiron this season. Although Thorpe and Captain Burd, the star end, and several other Aborigines have been laid up for a week at a time with injuries, it looks as if the prediction of Warner made early in the season were being fulfilled.

Warner says the team is the fastest aggregation he has ever seen. Captain Sampson Burd, Roberts and all the rest of the bruised players are fast rounding into form, and all will be in the lineup at the kickoff in the game aginst Brown.

In all of the games thus far this season the Indians have had one or more of their star players incapacitated, but Brown will meet the best Redskin combination. The Indians are keyed up to the highest pitch over the Brown game, as it is understood that Coach Robinson has been driving his team hard to defeat the Redmen, and thus finish the season with a victory over the team that humbled the Harvard team.

Brown Has New Plays.

Word has reached the Indian camp that Coach Robinson has many new plays to use Thursday, and that several of the plays are expected to dazzle Warner's team. The veteran Cornell coach is not to be outdone and has several new plays which he has held back to spring on Captain Sprackling's men.

The Indians expect a close game and will rely on the trusty foot of their great halfback, Thorpe, to pull them out of the hole in case they are not able to rush the ball over the goal line by straight football. He has been getting a great deal of practice lately in place-kicking, and has been having great success, being able to drop the ball over the bars from nearly every angle up to midfield.

It is the opinion of some here that the game will be one of the fastest the Indians have played in this season, as both teams play a wide-open game and use new football to a great extent. These people also believe that the game will be a goal kicking between the clever Thorpe and Sprackling, the leader of the Providence team and the diminutive halfback Crowther, in case the latter is called into the game to attempt a field goal. Capain Sprackling and Crowther are clever at this part of the game.

The Indians leave here to-morrow night and will reach Providence Monday morning. They will have one full day's rest in the Rhode Island capital, possibly running through a short signal drill Wednesday afternoon to keep them in good condition for the battle.

BRISTOL SCHOLASTIC LEAGUE ELECTION

ATTLEBORO, Nov. 27.—A meeting of the Bristol Interscholastic Baseball League was held at Mansfield. Attleboro, North Attleboro and Mansfield were represented, Franklin, the other team in the league, being absent. It was voted to ask Taunton High to take the place left vacant by Franklin. The following officers were elected: President, Principal A. W. Hadlock of Mansfield; vice-president, M. E. Clarke of Attleboro; secretary and treasurer, E. N. Babcock of North Attleboro.

HOLYOKE BOWLERS IN CANDLEPIN MATCH

HOLYOKE, Nov. 27.—Woodbury's Pets of Holyoke have accepted the challenge of Smith's All-Stars of this city for a six-string candlepin match, and the teams have agreed to roll for $25 a side. The Springfield rollers challenge any team in Western Massachusetts. The Pets are made up of Croteau, Considine, Senick, Beauchemin and George Ryan. Total pinfall for two matches will decide the winner, and the first three strings will be rolled on Smith's alleys, December 6. A week later the teams will meet in Holyoke.

With Football Season Over Harvard Turns to Hockey

By TED PAFKE.

Now that football on the college gridiron is at an end for the season of 1911 it really behooves us to let it die a natural death, but there are several reasons why we should keep it's wan ghost with us for a day or so more.

Football has been much harrassed recently by various persons, who alleged that there were glaring defects in the rules, which were tending to spoil the game from the sportsman's point of view. That this is the case was proved conclusively by the great game between Harvard and Yale last Saturday.

That contest showed beyond the shadow of a doubt that where two teams that are anywhere nearly evenly matched, meet on the gridiron that a slight superiority in rushing ability of one over the other, will not under the rules to-day, permit the one having this slight superiority to show it on the scoreboard.

That this is a defect surely no one will deny. To one who has watched the games under the old rules, the games of to-day seem like a hodge podge and a farce. Unless there is a vast difference between the teams struggling, the game results in a tie, unless of course, one side manages to score on a fluke or a lucky play, which cannot be called good football.

After the game on Saturday it seems almost certain that when the football rules committee meets this year, there will be some radical changes in the rules.

Some changes have been made necessary. Just what they will be, it is hard to predict, but the legislation most needed by the rules committee, is that which will permit a strengthening of the offence when within twenty-five yards of the goal of the defending teams, or which will forbid the strengthening of the defence of the defending team by bringing practically eleven men on the line of scrimmage.

The latter would seem to be unfair, and the logical ruling would be to permit a closer attack when within the territory mentioned, and possibly permit the teams to revert to the old game of helping the runner.

Teams Miss Mass Play.

As it stands now it is very evident that two teams like Harvard and Yale as they played Saturday, were helpless when they got within striking distance of their opponent's goal, not because they were not well trained or well drilled teams, but rather because they had been deprived of their most valuable asset for such a position—the old mass play.

Football to the minds of most everyone who has followed the game to any extent, is essentially a rushing rather than a kicking game, but the rules are such now, that it is the exact opposite of this.

Some have suggested that the distance to be gained in a given number of downs when within twenty-five yards of the defending team's goal, be reduced, or possibly another down being given to overcome the obstacles placed in the way of the team by the new rules.

Whether such a plan would be feasible is a matter for argument and may be well argued on both sides, but one thing is certain—there should be some relaxation or change in the rules with regard to this zone.

With Harvard's season over the question of the next Harvard captain arises. There seems to be but one logical candidate for this position, and he is Percy L. Wendell, Harvard's great line plunger. He has been on the team for two years, and last season won a place on the All-America team. He has played the most consistent football and seems the least liable to injuries of any of the men open for the position.

Some have mentioned Felton, the end and the man who made a name for himself against Yale by his magnificent punting. He is a good man but he has been out of the game half the season with injuries and Harvard wants someone who is certain to be playing at all times. This man is Wendell.

Failed to Use Wendell.

Since the end of the game Saturday the question has arisen a number of times "why was not Wendell used more in the game and why were there not more plays devised in which he would be carrying the ball?" No one knows, but it does seem as though he were used very little considering his ability.

He got loose both times he was sent on the tackle play, but it was not until Potter started his team on it's march down the field that Wendell was used to any extent and he made good with a vengeance.

Six Harvard men won their football "H" in the game with Yale last week for the first time. They were Hitchcock, left tackle; Leslie, left guard; Parmenter, centre; Storer, right tackle; Reynolds, left halfback, and Huntington, fullback.

All of the others who played had previously won their letter. T. Frothingham, Jr., won his "H" in the Yale game two years as did Fisher and Smith, while the others all won it last year at New Haven.

While the Crimson will lose a number of her most valuable men by graduation this year, there will still be a fairly good nucleus around which to build an eleven for 1912. The following men will be lost by graduation of those who played against Yale: Captain Fisher, Leslie, Smith, Parmenter, Potter, Campbell and Huntington.

This will leave Felton at end, Hitchcock at tackle, while Gardiner, the star right tackle, will be in the game next year, Gardner at quarter, Reynolds at half, while Keays, a sub guard, will work in well and Storer will probably go back from tackle to centre. There will also be an unusually number of good heavy men coming from the freshmen eleven, such as Brickley, the drop kicker, Hardwick, a remarkably fast and heavy back, Wigglesworth, a centre, who may make a good guard, and several other good players.

Freedley, the sub quarter this year, should have the first position on the eleven next Fall, for Gardner did nothing Saturday to entitle him to first choice next Fall.

Hockey Season to Start.

With football out of the way for another year and the grass on the gridiron in the Stadium once more getting a chance to breathe, followers of Harvard sports will now turn their attention to hockey, which has merely been biding its time and will now spring into full bloom.

The Harvard squad has been working out at the Arena for the past two weeks and Coach Winsor has a pretty good line on what he has to work with this year. The best men have not been reporting on account of their being connected with the football squad, such as Blackall and Captain Huntington. The beginning of next week, however, everyone will be out in full force for the hard work of the season.

The schedule of the games which the Crimson skaters will play this year has not yet been arranged, but it will include contests with the best of the sevens representing the big colleges of the East, with a scattering of the premier Canadian teams, such as McGill, and St. Michael's.

It may be remembered that Harvard has withdrawn from the Intercollegiate Hockey League and is, therefore, not in line for any championship honors, strictly speaking, but Captain Huntington feels that he has a good chance of developing a winning team from his material, and looks for a very successful season.

It is also hoped that a trip may be arranged for the Christmas recess which will take the men to Cleveland for a series of games and possibly over the border into Canada where a game or so will be played.

Five Veterans to Start.

For the team this year, there are five men back who played on the seven at different times last year, while there are a couple of very promising men from the freshmen team and a number of subs last year available again this season.

Captain Huntington will doubtless be back at point where he has played for the past two years. Willetts, one of the best men on the freshmen seven last year, is available and he and Blackall, who made his letter at point last season, will have a pretty duel for this job. Blackall has had more experience and may win out, but willetts is an exceptionally clever offensive as well as defensive player.

Gardner, the varsity quarterback and a sub goal last year on the seven, will have an easy time clinching the cage job this year.

R. F. Duncan is the only regular forward back in the game and he is pretty certain of his place. His job is that of rover and he has proved exceptionally fast and able in this sort of play.

Clifford, Childs and Pierce all played in forward positions last year at one time or another and all are good, fast workers, but in bidding for a position on the team they will be up against two men from the cub seven, who in their freshmen year, showed varsity ability.

These men are Sortwell and Hopkins, and if they keep up their good work of last year and add to it the improvement which should come with varsity coaching, they should be pretty certain of either wing.

Palmer a Clever Forward.

There is another man who has given evidence right along of being a strong forward and that is Palmer. He was not eligible for the team for the team last year, but will be this season and looks good. He is a fast skater and a good passer, and may fit in either for one of the forwards or possibly rover, Duncan going to centre.

In brief Harvard's hockey prospect is good and with the long steady practice they can now get with the Arena ice always in good shape they should be able to turn out an unusually good seven.

Cornell proved their only stumbling block last year in a game which had to go extra periods, and at the time the Crimson was playing in a very badly crippled condition.

There will be plenty of games in which the Crimson will participate at the Arena this year. There will be three games with Yale, one in Boston, one in New Haven and the third in New York. This last may be played only in case of tie, but followers of this sport will be sure to see the Elis in action here.

There will also in all probability be three games with Princeton, one on either team's home ground, and one in neutral territory. In addition, with Harvard playing a number of prominent teams in the Arena, plenty of good sport will be available for the Winter months.

CLARKE SEES SUCCESS FOR O'TOOLE IN 1912

ST. PAUL, Minn., Nov. 27.—Manager Fred Clarke of the Pirates, who is here on a short visit, expressed himself as greatly satisfied with the deal that brought Marty O'Toole to the Pittsburg Club. He declares that in Marty he sees one of the greatest pitchers in base ball and believes that his showing next season will be even greater than it was as a minor leaguer. Clark thinks that if O'Toole works his best and the Pirate team shows as well as it did when in form last season, his club will take the flag. Fred, with two other baseball stars, is heading for Josh Clark's farm, where they will do some hunting.

CROWELL FIVE AFTER RECORD

One of the speediest fives on the floor the coming season will represent the Crowell team of the South End, which in past years has made an enviable record in basketball circles. The team will be in charge of Al Young who is after only the fastest teams in Eastern Massachusetts.

Kerrigan and Costello will play forward positions, Bowe at centre and Shield and Mead will be the backs. Both Kerrigan and Costello gave a fine acount of themselves on the floor last season and should do even better the coming season. Kerrigan is a fine shooter and can hold his own with the best of them. Costello can be ranked with the best players in the State. He is a skillful shooter and a youngster who never gets careless no matter how much his team is ahead.

Young has made a ten-strike in securing Bowe for centre. He is a clever aggressive player and should make a fine man to build around. The backs, Shield and Mead, are defensive players of unordinary skill. They are always after their men and very few baskets are slipped to them.

Last season the team won ten out of fifteen games played, which speaks well for them, considering the fact that all games were played on foreign floors. Manager Young is after the St. Mary's of the North End, Lawrence Light Guards, Company K of Hingham, Myles Standish of Plymouth, Quincy A. C., Onteora Canoe Club and all other fast teams desiring games. Manager Al Young, No. 7 Ringold street, city.

KNOCKOUT BROWN IN IMPORTANT BATTLE

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Nov. 27.—Knockout Brown faces a crisis in his fighting career when he meets Bert Keyes for a fifteen-round go before the Crescent Athletic Club at the Casino to-night. Brown is matched to go fifteen rounds with Ad Wolgast at Frisco on Washington's Birthday, but if he does not dispose of Keyes to-night the latter will claim the first chance at Wolgast. A good-sized crowd is expected to see to-night's battle. Tommy Shea of this city and Tommy Stone of New York will mix it up for ten rounds at 118 pounds in the semi-final, and Dick Stone of this city and Tiger Tierney of Waterbury will provide the preliminary in an eight-round go at catchweights.

Schoolboy Sports

Coach Kendall of Medford High is working hard with his team in preparation for the game with Malden on Thanksgiving Day. This is one of the big games of the season and the outcome will mean much to either team. Both have lost one Suburban League game this season and a victory for either will mean that it ties for the leading honors.

The followers of Dorchester and Mechanic Arts are still sore on account of no game this season. This game on the Dunbar avenue grounds is always one of the big holiday attractions and a great boost to the coffers of both schools. Of course, this crowd goes to some other game and it looks as if the Somerville game and the English-Boston Latin game will draw many of this crowd.

The Boston Latin-English High game on Thanksgiving Day will be a bigger game than was at first expected. English played a great game against the High School of Commerce team on Wednesday and showed that they were in the running for the championship of the city, and Latin has eliminated Mechanic, so that the title lies between these two schools.

That Medford High-Rindge Technical game this afternoon at Medford should be a good attraction. This will be the last game for both teams before they go into their annual big battles next Thursday.

Medford High will be minus the services of Twombly, one of the backfield men, in the game with Malden on Thanksgiving Day. The Blue and White team will also have a star player back in the line-up, for Captain Brawley, who has been out since the Everett game, will be back. Twombly has an abscess in his nose and it is giving him much trouble.

The Oak Park High School eleven of Chicago, which is causing so much comment among the local scholastic followers, won the heavyweight championship last Saturday by defeating Hyde Park by a good score. Challenges have been thrown at the Cook County championship from several States, but from all indications the Chicago team wants to play the championship team of Greater Boston. Crane High, the team that won the lightweight championship, has challenged Oak Park, but a Boston team will get first chance.

Natick has at last booked a fine Turkey Day attraction. Milton High has been booked for that day and one of the hardest battles played in Natick this season is anticipated. The teams are about evenly matched this season. Milton has yet to meet defeat and they have played good strong teams this season.

Athletic relations have been broken between Brockton and Taunton, the bitter football rivals. In the game on Monday the Taunton team proved to be victorious, and after the game the Taunton rooters stoned the Shoe City boys out of town.

Official National League Averages

Honus Wagner, the Flying Dutchman, leads the National League in batting according to the official averages just given out by the League officials. Although his name is third on the list, being topped by Kirke and Jackson, two Rustler recruits, Hans is the real leader as both of the players who have better averages than he has played in less than forty games, whereas Wagner figured in 130 games. Wagner hit the pill for .334.

Kirke heads the list with an average of .300, but he played in only twenty games. Jackson, who follows Kirke, hit for .347 and played thirty-nine league games. Roy Miller, Donlin and Sweeney are other Rustlers who hit for more than .300.

Pittsburg and Boston are tied for having the greatest number of hitters in the three hundred class, each team having five men who hit above this mark.

Schulte of the Cubs leads the home run hitters with a record of twenty-one swats for the season, averaging a homer every seven games. Schulte also made thirty doubles and twenty-one triples, which makes him the biggest slugger the league has had in years.

Beacher of the Reds leads in base stealing with eighty thefts. Shekrd, the fleet outfielder of the Cubs leads in run getting, crossing the pan less than 121 times the past season. In team batting New York leads with 279, while the Rustlers were second with .267.

The averages of the players who batted for .300 or more are as follows:

SPRINGFIELD T. S. TO HAVE FAST TEAM

SPRINGFIELD, Nov. 27.—Each day brings new men out for basketball at the training school. Wednesday Merner, of last year's team, and Mann, the quarterback of the football team, put in an appearance. Mann is no novice at the game and in his first workout showed that he knows the science of the game. The men are fast learning the new rules. The out-of-bounds rule is the one that is giving the most trouble. Under the new rules the first man getting the ball, excepting the one who knocks it out, has the chance of putting it in play, while under the old ones the opposite side returned it. This rule makes the game faster in play and does not give so much chance for wrangling. Several new men are showing up well in practice. Nelson and Ash, forwards, display lots of ginger and pass the ball with accuracy. Both are excellent shots at the basket. There are yet several men of last year's team to report, which they will do after Thanksgiving. Class practice keeps them away, and as these games end this week, they will wait until vacation is over before getting acquainted once more with the indoor game. Swenson, the big centre of last year's team, was out watching the practice, but not in uniform.

PICK TENNIS TEAM TO DEFEND DAVIS CUP

MELBOURNE, Australia, Nov. 27.—The Australian team for the defence of the Dwight F. Davis international lawn tennis challenge cup has been selected. It is composed of Norman E. Brookes, Lycett, A. W. Dunlop and R. W. Heath. The American challengers for the Davis cup are William A. Larned, Maurice E. McLoughlin and Beals C. Wright. They arrived at Auckland, N. Z., on November 22, proceeding from there to Wellington, and thence by boat to Christ Church, where the challenge round with the Australians will be played, beginning December 30.

CLARK GRIFFITH IS AFTER YANK PLAYERS

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—It is reported that Clark Griffith, the new manager of the Washingtons, is anxious to make some sort of a trade with the Highlanders for Jack Knight and Earl Gardner. He may be willing to offer Shortstop McBride and one or two others in exchange, but it is highly improbable that the New York club will consider the proposition favorably. Another rumored trade involves the names of Miner Brown of the Cubs and Earl Moore of the Philadelphia Nationals. Chance of the Cubs is said to be angling for Sherwood Magee and Luderus of the Quakers.

KID GOODMAN AND MORIARTY TO MEET

A good card has been arranged for the Thanksgiving Day show at Unity Cycle, Lawrence. Kid Goodman is scheduled to meet Jim Moriarty in the main bout. Both of these boys are star performers and should put up a rugged mill. The men will weigh in at 142 pounds. It is very probable, however, that Goodman will not weight over 138 pounds. Goodman is a veteran of the roped arena and is sure to lead Moriarty a merry chase. The latter, however, is confident of victory.

LOCAL BOYS HIGH UP IN EASTERN

The official fielding averages of the Eastern League, just issued, show former Red Sox and Rustler players, besides many of the local boys, well up among the leaders. Of the nine positions two of them are led by former Boston stars.

Freddy Parent, the former Red Sox player, leads the centre fielders with a perfect fielding average, while "Bud" Sharpe leads the first basemen with an average of .992.

The second basemen are led by McDermott of Providence with an average of .980 for 13 games. Freddy Parent is second with .967 for 39 games, while Charley French, a former Red Sox infielder, third with .963, having participated in 112 games.

Billy Purtell, who with Frank Smith was traded to the Red Sox last year in exchange for Harry Lord and Amby McConnell, and who was later turned over to Montreal, is seventh among the shortstops. Rock of Providence has made the best showing, with an average of .946 for 140 games.

Schirm of Buffalo leads the left fielders with an average of .276 for 118 games. Deiniger made but 15 errors in the 155 games he played.

Perry Played Good Ball.

It looks as though Perry would climb back into big company again next season. This youngster was taken on the training trip with the Red Sox early in the spring, and as John I. Taylor had too many good outfielders he tossed up between Perry and Riggert and the former lost and was let out to the Providence club.

His showing this season has been of the best. He is ninth among the centre fielders, with an average of .952 for 140 games. He was also well up among the leaders with the stick. Another former Red Sox who stands out well among the centre fielders is Jack "Bullet" Thoney. In the 34 games that the champion hard-luck man has taken part in he has made one slip up, and ranks next to Freddy Parent, the leader, with an average of .985.

Henline of Buffalo and Baltimore, Corcoran of Baltimore and Swayne of Newark, are all tied for first position among the right fielders with perfect averages of 1.000. Henline has taken part in more games than any of the others, and deserves the credit of being the leader. "Wee" Willie Keller is 14th among the list, with an average of .924.

Two Red Sox recruits stand well up among the catchers. Cady is eighth and Tonneman tenth with averages of .974 and .973 respectively.

Sox Players Up in List.

Tonneman took part in a few of the closing games at the Huntington avenue grounds, and convinced the crowd that he was fast enough for the major league. Cady will be taken South with the Red Sox on the training trip next Spring.

Catchers LeClaire and Killian of Toronto, Maroney of Providence, Von Winkle of Buffalo and Gantt of Baltimore are tied for first position among the pitchers with perfect averages.

Maroney is a South Boston boy, and formerly played with the Phillies. Charlie Smith, Burke, Barberish, Beldient, Burchell are the other former Boston stars recorded with the pitchers of the league.

The teams are all pretty well bunched in the club fielding averages. Toronto, Montreal and Buffalo are tied for first place, with an average of .958, Jersey City and Buffalo are next with .957. Providence follows with .952, while Newark and Rochester are tied for the cellar position with a percentage of .949, but eight points behind the leaders.

Basketball Notes

The Notre Dames are anxious to fill their schedule and would like to hear from some of the following fives: West End A. A., Lawrence Light Guards of Medford, Co. G, Gloucester, Onteora Canoe Club of Malden, St. Joseph's A. A., Clark Five of Stoughton and the St. Francis Five of Charlestown. Manager A. T. Curtis, box 5282, city.

The Columbias of South Boston would like to arrange games with 120-pound teams away from home. Would like to hear from the Union A. C. of South Weymouth, Hyde Park Juniors and other strong fives wishing to arrange games. Manager Patrick C[illegible]oy, No. 591 East Fourth street, South Boston.

The Jonquin A. C. of Winthrop would like to arrange games with 75-80-pound teams away from home. Half expenses expected for six men. Manager Carl Campbell, No. 109 Circuit road, Winthrop.

The Cambridge Red Sox would like to hear from the Onteora Canoe Club, Lawrence Light Guards of Medford, Foxboro, Keene, N. H., Derry, N. H., and all other fast amateur teams. Manager F. Cavanaugh, No. 50 Bridge street, East Cambridge.

The Farley A. C. five of Brookline would like to meet the fastest 115-pound teams in the State. Expenses given or taken. Manager John D. Sullivan, No. 95 Pearl street, Brookline.

HIGH ROLLING BY FITTON FIVE

Surprises, low and high scores, featured the past week in bowling circles. As a matter of fact, very little was done by any of the rollers, who seemed to have an off week. In the Columbus Club League the Fitton team set up a new mark of 522 for a team single string total and carried off the week's honors.

The Carruth team jumped into the lead in the City League by winning four points from Elite. This match was rather a surprise, as many thought an even break looked good. Billy Ferris' lads were away off form, and made a miserable showing. The Boylston team took second place, leaving Elite and Murray to be content with third.

In the Suburban Knights of Columbus League, St. John's Council jumped into the lead by a comfortable margin. The Arlington and Winchester teams are five points behind, being tied for second position with fifteen won and nine lost.

A hot fight is being waged in the A. O. U. W. League, with Franklin, Oriental and Vulcan as the contestants. Franklin is leading by one point the other two teams, who are tied for second position. Allston and Maplewood are tied for first place in the K. of C. League after some hard matches.

The fight in the Mystic Valley League is getting interesting. Cumulet is leading by one point while three teams are tied for second position. Rooney still continues high roller with a fine average of 110½.

Notes of the Alleys

Corbin of the Shawmut camp is getting the pins in A1 style these days. In the matches of the Bank and Trust League the other night the old boy got the wood for a single string of 141, and not being satisfied with this he rolled up a three-string total of 366, all of which goes to show what a banker can do when he tries.

The question is bobbing up frequently these days, what is the matter with the rollers of the Elite team? The ragged showing of the five against the Carruth team in the City League has made the bowling "bugs" sit up and take notice. Whether they were away off form or got a stage fright going in the alleys, is the question; anyway they made a showing that would do an amateur team injustice.

And talking about the Elite-Carruth match, did you take notice of Millar's miserable showing? This high roller who had been travelling at a terrific rate since the season opened, took an awful tumble and fell way under the century mark in every string. It must be admitted that Millar did have some tough breaks, but he had some dandy ones, too.

Lewis, in the A. O. U. W. League, is finding the candlepins to his liking these days, judging by the way he toppled them in this week's matches. Three strings for 116, 122 and 99 is going some. That ball is skimming the alleys in good style and gets the wood in the right place every time.

The Mohoncas bowling team of Charlestown is on the warpath. This bunch of youthful rollers is after the eighteen-year-old teams, barring none. They are willing to bowl in any alley—in Boston and on any night except Tuesday. Manager Walter Upton, Forest place, Charlestown.

CUBANS BEAT GIANTS.

HAVANA, Nov. 27.—Almendares defeated the New York National League baseball team by a score of 6 to 4.

GOTCH TURNS ZBYSCO DOWN

CHICAGO, Nov. 27.—The first shot in a wrestling war which involves Champion Frank Gotch and Yussiff Mahmout on one side and Stanislaus Zbysco and his manager, Jack Herman, on the other, has been fired and the contest threatens to be a fierce one. Zbysco on several occasions has hurled defis at the champion for a return match for the world's championship and offered Gotch $10,000 if he would sign, this amount regardless of what Frank might get from the club promoting the match.

For a time the Humboldt grappler ignored the offer altogether. Then he decided to call the Pole to see if he really would give the amount mentioned. Later he passed all this up and decided to send Yussiff Mahmout against the Polish champion.

Whatever chance there was for the Pole and Gotch to meet has now disappeared and the only hope left for the Pole is to throw the Turk. Then Gotch will wrestle.

Gotch Ridicules Offer.

Gotch at no time took Zbysco's offer serious, and is of the belief that the $10,000 Herman speaks of is stage money.

"The Pole's offer to give me $10,000 to meet him is bunk, pure and simple," said the champion. "He is looking for cheap advertising. I wonder if he would bet $10,000 on a match, not stage money, but real money. I might wrestle him under such conditions, but on second thought I think I'll let him beat a few of the other wrestlers.

"I'll bet him $10,000 he can't beat Mahmout in a finish match. There's a chance to get some easier money than he could by meeting me. I have beaten both of them and feel that I can do it again."

"I believe that the worst thing that could be done for the wrestling game would be for me to meet the Pole again. Why should I wrestle him? I beat him with the greatest ease, and the people would not care to see another contest between us. If I were to beat him in eight or ten minutes, as I probably would, there would be another scandal marked up against the sport.

"I am willing to take on Gama or any of the other good men I have not beaten, but can see no demand for a match between myself and Zbysco. I do not believe a match between us in Chicago would draw the $10,000 Jack Herman says he would like to give me."

Gotch will tour the East after leaving Chicago, and after two weeks on the road will return to his home at Humboldt. On January 10 he sails for a tour of Europe.

And in the meantime Jess Pedersen, the big Scandinavian wrestler, is going along quietly, making a strong bid for a chance at some of the good ones. While he would like to bet on a meeting with the real champion later on in the season, he knows that the way to get up to that is to defeat some of the minor stars of the game.

After Some Good Men.

The Scandinavian is not averse to taking holds with Mahmout, Zbysco, Romanoff, Cordrelli or any of the others, but he wouldn't care to take them on for a little time, or until he arrives in first-class condition. Experts who have watched Jess in his work say that he is the "real fellow" and that he will prove himself better than any of them before he has been through the remainder of the season.

"If they wrestled Graeco-Roman style over here, there would be nothing but a succession of victories for Pedersen," Moje said last night in talking about his big star. "But he learns the catch-as-catch-can gave very quickly because he is a man of high intelligence. And before long, after he has had just a little experience, you will see a remarkable athlete and one capable of downing any of them.

"Pedersen was a mighty hard man to get over to this country, and then came only at a high price. He is a man of considerable wealth and can do so well in Europe, where he is regarded as the very highest type of man, that he did not look upon an American tour with much favor. But now that he is started on it, he is going to show them here that he is the biggest of them all."

GOOD MAT BOUTS FOR THANKSGIVING NIGHT

Wrestling fans are showing keen interest in the series of finish contests which make up the carnival of wrestling in Mechanics' Building on Thanksgiving night. Not only is this interest high in the main event, in which the Giant Romanoff will try to see if he can dispose of the veteran Lundin faster than did Zbyszko, but also in the contest in which Americus, the Baltimore wonder, meets John Perelli, the Italian, to settle once for all which is the better. The friends of Cyclone Burns, the only heavyweight of whom Boston can boast, are wondering whether he can throw Polski, the Finlander. If Burns wins he intends to try to secure a match with Americus later in the season.

HICTANER

The Man That Lived in the Water

By JEAN DE LA HIRE

TO-DAY'S INSTALMENT

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner

"HOW would he receive my visit? Would my curiosity seem permissible to him, or would he ask me very firmly to never again enter places not allowed me by my father and uncle?

"Would he not, besides, take precautions to prevent me ever going again?

"Something powerful and mysterious was forcing me to visit the forbidden post alone.

"My talks with Hictaner had given me some insight into these mysteries. Antil's ignorance only added to the darkness which my mind so longed to penetrate.

"I felt that I should find out some things in this telephone post which would make me see more clearly the relationship between my father, Hictaner, my uncle, myself and Severac; things which would further explain to me—things which would untangle somewhat the snarl of words and facts with which my mind had so hopelessly grappled since my first interview with Hictaner.

"On the spot I decided upon a ruse, and I went up to my room again, decided to wait for night to explore the lower regions of Cabrera Isle.

The Midnight Visit

"I will not describe my impatience nor the subterfuges by which I tried to hasten the march of time.

"I went to bed at 9 o'clock as if to sleep. At midnight I got up, put on my felt slippers and a soft, warm peignoir, dark in color, and taking an electric pocket lamp which I found in my room, I descended rapidly to the ground floor of the house.

"I went through the passage, the iron door, the stairway.

"Suddenly I found myself in the telephone station. It was a large, square room, filled with machines.

"A great stone table with a thick glass top filled the centre of it. On the table were two familiar instruments, larger than usual—a receiver and a weird telephone transmitter.

"A little discouraged by seeing no books or notes lying about which I could consult, I was looking vaguely at the apparatus, when a brisk ringing made me jump.

Then there was silence.

"My heart beat hard, as if something serious were being vaguely forecast.

"Some moments passed thus in irresolution.

"I heard the click of opening doors, and of steps more and more distinct.

"Some one was coming.

"I was confused for a moment, but hid quickly behind the rocky foundation of a large apparatus, putting up my electric lamp, and, crouching down, hardly breathed.

"It was Antil who appeared. As he entered he pressed a button, and the room was brightly lighted. Then the man seated himself at the table. Worked the lever of the transmitter and said:

"'All right; Antil is here.'

He drew an ivory plaque and pencil from his pocket and waited.

Orders from Master

A moment's silence passed. There was a second ring, and from the phonographic receiver came these words:

"Order from the master to Antil:

"'If Hictaner goes to the Cabrera station hide everything from him concerning Moisette's deliverance and transfer, and all facts relating to her.

"'If Hictaner is encountered during the voyage do not let him know that she is abroad.

"'Give her a narcotic and shut her in the secret cabin of the launch, so that if he goes abroad, he will not even suspect her presence.

"'All these orders concern the prisoner Vera as well. That is all. The master is well pleased.'

"Antil took down the words as the phonograph pronounced them. When he had finished he said into the transmitter:

"'The orders will be faithfully carried out. The electric launch bearing Moisette, Vera and Antil will leave Cabrera for the Lost Isle at eight o'clock. The secret will be guarded. The communication will be destroyed.'

"I was completely unnerved. I waited as long as my impatience would let me, and went to my room to shut myself in and think over things at my leisure.

"When I had lain down, I stretched out on my bed, and tried to collect my thoughts. I went over each word of the message.

"I came to this conclusion:

Antil Had Lied

"Antil had lied to me. He knew Hictaner.

"If they took me from Severac, it was not to give me to Hictaner. Then why was it? Why did they try to take my beloved from me and to leave him ignorant of my safety?

"All night long, and during the entire voyage from Cabrera to the Lost Isle, I turned over these questions a thousand times in my mind. The only answer I could get was this:

"A mysterious and terrible purpose directs the acts of my father Oxus and my uncle Fulbert.

"What is this purpose? That is what I cannot fathom, and yet it is the thing I must know.

"In short, I reached the Lost Isle without having slept and without Hictaner having met us.

"Knowing when to expect us, my uncle and my father were waiting for us on the rocks. Vera was shut up, I don't know where, and my father and uncle greeted me with unconcealed joy in their transfigured faces and led me to my rooms, where some food had been prepared for me.

"I ate a little and went to bed, resolved o come to you at daybreak. Madame Martha, what do you think of the things have told you? What do you think of , now that you are sure your mind is elieved of the darkness which overlouded it?"

Moisette took Madame Martha's hands ovingly. Madame Martha, pale as death nd with lowered eyes, did not reply at nce.

Her hands trembled in those of the young rl, and only then did Moisette notice hat her friend was in the clutches of a ost violent emotion. She was about speak again when Madame Martha fted her eyes and said, choked with feelg:

"Moisette, was your abductor's name verac?"

"Yes, Madame."

"Charlie Severac?"

"Yes, Madame."

"How does he look?"

Moisette described as well as she could verac's physical appearance.

"It is he," exclaimed Madame Martha. The poor woman fell back on the divan, ruck to the heart so that her life seemed cease.

Mothers of Mamies

A MOTHER'S devotion is the loftiest trait the world ever knew; even the cynics who despise every human relationship admit it. And the world, while praising this trait of superhuman sacrifice and love in a loud voice, is just as unanimous in declaring, in lower tones, that it is also at times the greatest bore.

A woman appears at a card party, late, flustered and out of breath because of some demands made by her daughter Mamie, and she begins her game with her mind filled with Mamie, and sandwiches every deal, interrupts every play and forgets her own turn, in conversation devoted to Mamie.

The length of Mamie's new skirt, what Mamie wants for Christmas, the name of Mamie's new dog, the color of Mamie's new hat, what Mamie says when she first gets up, and what Mamie says when she goes to bed; Mamie, Mamie, Mamie, until the three women playing with the mother don't know if they are playing bridge, poker, thumbs up, or Mamie, and if the Jack is the high card out, or if it is Mamie.

Mamie is dealt with every hand, Mamie is served with the refreshments, Mamie is dished up again when the tables are cleared, and if the players progress to another table Mamie moves with them.

Mamie percolates all through the room the guests begin to envy the maid out the kitchen; she may have her hands in hwater and not get enough wages to y new hair more than twice a week, but least she can wash dishes without the ling that she is washing Mamie.

The mothers of Mamies trot out their mies in their conversation at teas and eptions. They interrupt the dry goods rks in their measurings with anecdotes out Mamie, and the butcher hears so ich of her he chops at his bones iously.

What a great trait is mother love, and en the mother is a mother like Mamie's, w much greater it is when far away!

Mademoiselle Gaby Deslys On How to Keep Young and Pretty

Copyright, 1911, by the National News Association

By GABY DESLYS

THE maid whom I have had with me for a long time saw my first article in the paper the other day. She said with much feeling:

"Mademoiselle must not forget to mention 'polishing,' for it is to that she owes her beauty quite as much as to her smile."

Indeed, I won't forget it. It's a process which I go through every day with the aid of the maid, and after I am all done I feel so comfortable and happy that if I were a kitten I should purr.

Now this is what polishing consists of:

Every morning after I have had my breakfast, which I take in bed, and when I have answered my mail and read the last paper that comes from my dear and far away Paris, I have my bath. So does everyone, I hope. But unlike most people, I do not dry myself with towels. A quantity of the very finest sea sand is heated until it is quite hot and brought in on a large piece of canvas. When I get out of the tub I am rubbed with this sand until I am not only perfectly dry, but until my skin has acquired a perfect polish, as the maid calls it, and feels soft and satiny to the touch.

This hot sea sand isn't a vanity of mine, and I do not use it to do something extraordinary, but once upon a time long ago a doctor recommended it to me when I was suffering from a kind of neuritis. I had a bag of sand heated very hot, which was placed upon the painful spot, and I was always massaged and rubbed with sand. It did my skin so much good, besides taking away the pain, that I have kept it up ever since, and I think that is one reason why little Gaby is never troubled with those hateful skin blemishes or that hard, dry skin which is so ugly to look at and so uncomfortable to have.

The sand bath, so my maid tells me, will take away the down which some women have on their forearms, and rubbing the upper arms with hot sand is the best kind of friction and treatment for the queer kind of reddish skin others have at the back of the upper arm.

Of course the sand acts a good deal like pumice stone. I also have a little heart-shaped piece of pumice stone, which is quite soft, and which is used for callous places on the feet, and sometimes when I have ink spots on my fingers from writing for you.

I think that the most important time for beautifying the body and skin is just after the bath, and I believe thoroughly in rubbing oneself with oil if the skin is too dry, or with camphor water if the flesh is flabby. This camphor water is made of camphor dissolved in spirits of cologne, and then diluted with water until it does not sting. It is very good for older people, both men and women, as it keeps the flesh hard, and it invigorates and stimulates the whole body.

As to the bath itself, there are all kinds of wonderful bath salts which you can use in the water you bathe in, so that by just shaking a handful of salts of one kind or another into the bath water you feel that you are getting all the benefit of a foreign bath cure without having the bore of going there.

When you were little, having your daily bath was a terrible ordeal. It was to me, but now I love it for its stimulating effect, and the sand rub is so pleasant that I sing merrily every morning, and start the day right anyhow, for if you sing in your tub it is healthier and luckier than getting out of bed with the right foot first.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

TOO TRIFLING TO WORRY ABOUT

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

What would you think of a young man who, on leaving a girl friend of his acquaintance, promises to telephone, or write her, in a few days and neglects to do so? Would it appear as though the girl were running after him if she were to phone him and ascertain his reason for not keeping his promise? What is the wisest course to follow?

H. G.

THE wisest course to pursue, my dear, is to forgive and forget. Do not let this trouble you or think of it further.

MARRIAGE IMPOSSIBLE WITHOUT CONCESSION

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am seriously in love with a young lady about my own age. I am sure my love is reciprocated, but our religions differ. Her parents are very pleased with me and are willing to have me as a son-in-law, but my mother and father are very much against a wedding on account of our religious differences. If I marry this girl my parents threaten to refuse to recognize me, and I feel that if I have to give her up I shall never marry.

HEARTBROKEN.

YOU can marry happily on only one condition. Either she must change her religious belief and adopt your faith, or vice versa. In this matter your parents must be consulted and their advice and decision abided by.

Of course, there must be mutual understanding between all concerned and final consent and satisfaction before marriage is possible.

THERE MAY BE OTHER REASONS

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am only seventeen and in love with a man four years my senior. My parents object to us going out together, thinking I am too young, also because he is only a workman. Having an older sister who is not yet engaged seems to be another cause of objection.

B. S.

IT certainly is not fair that you should give up this man's friendship simply because he is a workman or because your older sister is not married, though you are rather young to become engaged. Your parents may have some stronger objection to the young man; however, ask permission to see him only once in two weeks. Your friendship will not be broken or your parents disobeyed. If this is satisfactory to every one you will be able to prove that your regard for him is not only sincere but lasting.

AGE IS NO BAR

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty-five and very much in love with a man of twenty-one. I look the difference in our ages, and his people have objections to our attachment. He cares for me. What should I do?

I. L. H.

YOUR happiness depends entirely upon your suitability to each other. Age has not a great deal to do with marriage. Time is the best test to prove if you are congenial.

Wait for a year to see if your love lasts, and at the end of this time, if you feel the same, I think you have every chance for happiness.

Selecting a Wife

By DOROTHY DIX

A PERPLEXED youth, torn between conflicting emotions, writes me:

"I am in sorry straits. I am engaged to a young lady who is a red hot Suffragette. I love her deeply, but she does everything of which I disapprove.

"She is mannish in dress and walk, while I like a woman to glide and wear frilly clothes.

"She carries a night key, and comes home when she likes, while I think a woman should be a clinging vine.

"She thinks a married couple foolish to have children for ten years, while I just dote on babies.

"Ought I to marry her?"

Certainly not, son, unless your idea of matrimony is a drawn battle instead of a grand, sweet song. Two people whose opinions and tastes are as antagonistic as yours and this girl's could no more get along peaceably together than fire and water.

And the pity of it is that Old Mother Nature, who concerns herself with the good of the race and not the happiness of the individual, almost invariably gives to men and women endowed with these opposite characteristics a fatal fascination for each other, so that they marry each other and live scrappily ever afterward.

Don't be misled, son, into believing that marriage is some sort of magic soothing syrup that softens down all the angles in people's dispositions, and makes those who have always disagreed on every subject able to agree as soon as the knot is tied.

Take it from me as a sure tip that the matrimonial yoke isn't a patent adjustable collar. It's the most stiff and unyielding stock that was ever invented, and the most liable to gall. Also, people are not changed by having the marriage service read over them. As they were before wedlock in character and disposition, so they are in wedlock. Only a little more so.

The End Is Reno

Therefore, if you wish to be happy though married, pick out the kind of a wife you want, instead of marrying the one who is exactly the sort of a woman you don't approve of, and then trying to make her over into your ideal. Believe me, that is a painful process, the end whereof is generally Reno.

Of course it is part of every man's vanity to believe that his wife is going to be as plastic as clay in his hands, and that he can mold her character to suit his own fancy. Never was there a greater fallacy on earth than this. By the time a girl is old enough to marry she has hardened into the sort of a woman she is going to be, and you could change the color of her eyes or the shape of her face easier than you could her tastes and beliefs and standards of conduct.

The question of whether she is going to be independent or clinging, sensible or a fool, broad minded or narrow and prejudiced, thrifty or a spendthrift, is already settled, son, and no mere man can alter the verdict. She's there to take or leave, but she is THERE.

One could laugh at your own particular dilemma, were not your case so typical of the many matrimonial tragedies that result from a man marrying the kind of a girl he doesn't want instead of the sort of a one he does, and then quarreling with her ever after because she isn't something that she never pretended to be.

In your case you have drawn the picture of an ultra-modernist girl. A girl who is independent, intelligent, self-willed and determined. There's nothing wrong about her. She has as much right to her political opinions as you have to yours. If she prefers to wear sensible, comfortable clothes, instead of lacing herself into tight fronts, she certainly has common sense and hygiene on her side of the question. And surely the woman who must bear children should even have the privilege of deciding that important problem of married life.

It seems to me that she has played fair in letting you see exactly the sort of a wife she would make, and it's up to you to beat a masterly retreat on the safe side of the altar, simply and solely because this girl, with her advanced ideas, isn't the sort of a wife you want.

What you are looking for is a sweet, fluffy headed little creature, who dotes on dolling herself up, and who will sit at your feet and ask you what you think she thinks about everything from politics to pie.

In my opinion the reason there is so much domestic misery all about us is chiefly because so many men do the thing you are tempted to do—marry women who are one thing and then expect them to be something else. We should think a man a candidate for a lunatic asylum if he bought a grand piano and then complained because it was not a cook stove when he got it home.

But that is no more unreasonable than for a man to marry a girl because she is a beautiful butterfly of fashion, and then blame her because she is not a thrifty, hard-working domestic wife. Nor is it more ridiculous than for a man to pick out a professional woman, who has achieved success in some calling on which she has put years of study and effort, and then feel himself ill used because she does not want to give up her lifework and become a darner of stockings.

There Are All Kinds

Yet we see these ill assorted matches made daily, when the men might just as well have picked out the kind of a wife they wanted in the first place.

The attraction that draws people of opposite tastes and temperament together doesn't last. The only tie that endures is of similarity. The people we like best are those who are most like ourselves, and who agree with us instead of contradicting us.

This being true, when you marry, son, pick out a woman who rides the same hobbies you do. Thus shall you amble along peacefully, side by side, through life.

Necessity, Etc.

SHE was a fair-haired lady, an actress by profession, and dainty withal. Her head was covered by a concoction in keeping with her general makeup.

Briefly, the headgear consisted of a bow-like foundation, from which protruded plumes mounted on slender wires.

She sauntered into a theatre, armed with a free pass, and took her seat to witness the great piece, "Ashamed of Her Pomeranian; or, Expelled from the Baronial Hall."

As she viewed the stage she felt some one tugging at her hat. She turned loftily and haughtily.

"Does my hat annoy you?" she asked.

"Not at all," replied her neighbor in the back row.

The footlight favorite thought for a time. Then she feared she had been ungracious, and, like Dick Whitington, she turned again.

"Perhaps my plumes interfere with your view?" she suggested, more amiably.

"Oh, no, thank you!" said the self-possessed young woman. "I've bent 'em back!"

Sad Man—I guess, Y'r Honor, I'll withdraw the suit and wait for a few years.

Judge—What for?

TURKISH GOV'T
HERSHFIELD

As might have been expected, Claude and Rosamond are on the side of the Italians. Equally as might have been expected, Desmond is on the side of the Turks, that is, his sympathies lie on that side. He takes no personal part in the battle, however. Desmond is, indeed, a doway bird.

Even Rosamond takes a hand in the battle against the power of the unspeakable Turk. With the fighting spirit of Molly Pitcher, Carrie Nation and Mrs. Pankhurst rolled into one, Rosamond loads the heavy guns that are to tear apart the infidel ranks. Even Claude is astonished by her bravery, and loves her more than ever.

Inspired by Rosamond's courage, Claude determines to do some particularly brilliant act of heroism all by himself. Noticing a Turkish field gun, the horses drawing it apparently having bolted from the lines, Claude resolves to capture it single handed. A hard task, but one the accomplishment of which will bring much publicity.

And Claude does succeed in capturing the gun. He grabs the bridles of the horses and is leading them to the Italian lines when the wheels stick in the mud. Strenuously Claude tugs away at the horses, but he cannot get them to budge their heavy load. It is an exasperating situation for a hero.

What ho! It is Desmond again. He jumps up like a jack-in-the-box, slashes the traces, and the horses, suddenly released, tumble down the hill on top of Claude Eclair. A rough surprise for a young man, who already saw his face on a lot of moving picture films. Ah me, this cruel world.

"I'm the boy!" cries Desperate Desmond, "and I've got a hero boxed up!" He has Claude safely shut up in the ammunition box, and is ready to wheel him away to some secret lair. Of course, Desmond may be balked by the arrival of troops, but we can't learn the truth till to-morrow.

Senseless Chatter

By WINIFRED BLACK

LAST night I went to dinner with three women and three men.

This morning I feel as if I had two heads and four tongues and not an ear to my name.

No, it wasn't the things we had to drink—it was a strictly temperance dinner—it was the things we had to talk about.

Two of the men were unusually clever talkers. One of them had just come back from a long trip to Central Asia, where he had lived with some queer kind of old being who dyed his beard scarlet and wore a yellow robe and green slippers. And the other man had just written, rehearsed and produced an exceedingly successful play. The third man had sense enough to sit and listen to the news about these things.

The women? Not they!

What did they care about Central Asia or about the way a man rehearses a play. What the woman at dinner wanted to talk about was the weather, and the new hats, and the Smithses' mother-in-law, and the Joneses' new cousin come from nobody knows where, my dear, "with the queerest clothes, full skirts such as they wore two years back," and the sales in gloves and the maid who waited upon the table, and the maid who opened the door, and was it true that Miss So and So was really engaged, or was it just newspaper talk? Personalities, personalities, personalities, and the stupidest kind of personalities at that.

One of the clever men started, poor thing, to tell a clever story. Just as he was getting to the point, "s-z-z-z" his wife whispered in my entrance ear: "Have you seen those new gloves at So and So's?" and I shall never know how that story ended unless I ring up the clever man on the phone and make him tell me; and if I do that, I suppose both he and his wife will think I am trying to make love to him.

"They were talking about plays. "I remember," said one clever man—"Waush," chattered the clever man's wife, "weren't those dresses frights in that play?"

PILES SATISFACTORILY TREATEDINTENNESSEE

Resinol the Secret—Sold Everywhere

There seems to be no end to the uses to which Resinol is put. Here is a man who first used it for piles, then local troubles, and lastly for perspiring feet. All experiments have proven successful. Read what he says:

"I began the use of Resinol Ointment about ten years ago for piles; results satisfactory; finally used it for all local troubles, and lastly for perspiring feet, and it was more than satisfactory, and that after I had spent over a hundred dollars for different remedies and medical fees without results. Since then have recommended it to dozens of people, and it has never failed to cure.

"D. L. KILLIAN,
"Memphis, Tenn."

Not only is Resinol Ointment good for piles, but it is unsurpassed in relieving scalds and burns, chilblains, cracked lips, itching, blackheads, boils, or any form of eruptive skin disease, as eczema, tetter, ringworm, barber's itch, etc. Resinol Ointment can be purchased from your druggist in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes, but if you prefer to try a free sample write to Department 23, Resinol Chemical Co., Baltimore, Md.

"Hideous," eagerly assented the first clever man's wife, "and didn't the leading woman look exactly like that sister-in-law of the Smiths, who visited them Winter before last?" And then we had to hear all about the Smiths and their sister-in-law—no, it was a step-mother—and she'd been married three times, I remember—nothing pretty about her either, so they said—and all about Smith and the way he walked, and the way he talked and what train he came home on at night when he lived out at Cohasset.

And then both of those women complained bitterly that both of their husbands buried themselves in their papers all through breakfast and never said one word during the meal—no, nor listened to one either.

If I were married to a woman like that, I'd bury myself in something, if it was nothing more thrilling than the almanac. The signs of the zodiac are at least picturesque and tantalizing to the imagination.

Men just as bad? I don't believe it.

Now, one of the men at that fateful dinner was a dull, commonplace, unimaginative sort of well-meaning person, but do you suppose he would ever have dreamed of telling us what he and his partner had for luncheon, and who paid for it; and what the waiter said when they asked why the soup was cold, and what kind of a house his partner's sister's best friend was building, and who was going to furnish it, and the sort of place his own mother's grandmother had once, back in Ohio? I trow not.

If he ever started to do it some one would yawn and say: "As I was saying, old man," and there would be an end to the family chronicles for that occasion.

The world is an awfully interesting place. Sisters of the personalities habit, why don't you wake up and find out something about it, just for once?

I'm going to put an old fashioned money box on my family table, and the first little girl who begins to inflict the meal with purely personal chatter will have to drop a penny in that box, and when there is money enough in the box I'll let her have it to buy her doll a brand new hat upon the sole condition that she doesn't tell me or any one else on earth where she buys the hat, what she pays for it, or what kind of hair the woman has who sells it to her.

I'd rather a daughter of mine grew up a bespectacled bluestocking than a He-She-His-I-My-Me-Mine bore. Wouldn't you?

Her Secret

RECENTLY a Glasgow minister was calling upon a dear old lady, one of the "pillars" of the church to which they both belonged. As he thought of her long and useful life, and looked upon her sweet, placid countenance, bearing but few tokens of her ninety-two years of earthly pilgrimage, he was moved to ask her:

"My dear Mrs. S——, what has been the chief source of your strength during all these years? What has appealed to you as the real basis of your unusual vigor of mind and body, and has been to you an unfailing comfort through joy and sorrow? Tell me, that I may pass the secret on to others, and, if possible, profit by it myself."

The old lady thought a moment, then, lifting her eyes, dim with age, yet kindling with sweet memories of the past answered briefly:

PART TWO—(Continued)

A NOTE of warmth crept into his voice as he spoke of the man who had died fighting. Very few details had come through; there were no accurate accounts of his death—but the main fact was enough. He had remained behind to allow his wife and a wounded man to make good their escape. Whatever John Martindale's life—and in Tring's mind there was no doubt that John Martindale and the man the world called John Saxe were in some mysterious way identical—no matter what the nature of the ugly secret the man who had been his friend had carried with him into the unknown, his death had been the death of a man, and, perhaps, in the baptism of his own blood, his sins had been washed away.

Face Whitened

Clemency listened to the story with a whitening face.

"I had heard nothing of that," she said. "Of course it isn't possible that I could. I was ill. I caught jungle fever in the forest on the journey down to the coast, and when I got possession of my senses again I found myself in a mission hospital in the hills. You can't think how horrible it is that feeling of weeks dropped out of one's life," she cried. "But, no whisper of this tragedy had come through even by the time I had left the hills. How strange it is. It makes me wonder——"

She passed her hand wearily over her face.

"Oh, that hateful, hateful country." Her voice ran up a shrill crescendo of passionate dislike that almost startled the man. "Con—if you bore malice—if you had any womanish desire to cry, 'I told you so,' how you could gratify all your spleen—for that I had followed your advice and stayed at home. It is the mystery of it all"——

"Yes. It is a land of mystery. I—this story of rebellious natives—it coincides so oddly with the delirium of my fever." He could see that the obsession of memory was over her so fiercely that it crowded out horror or sympathy for the story he had told her. "You know I have the most odd and fixed impression," she continued, "that on the journey down to the coast our boys and bearers deserted. Grieve, the Scotch servant who had charge of my party, tells me it is all a delusion—an hallucination of my fever. But, surely, no woman ever suffered a more horrible—a more agonizing delusion! It seemed to me—it seems to me now as I speak to you here in the train—an actual happening. I remember with most terrible vividness the desolation that the realization of that desertion brought to me. They had taken our food—our money. Afterward . . . it seemed to me that Grieve and I were lost in the forest . . . oh, the terrible groping for the path, the struggle against the loneliness and power of the forest."

Her voice broke.

Learning to Forget.

"Don't think of it! You must not think of it!" Tring cried quickly. "It is left behind that memory—it will fade soon. You mustn't brood—I want you to promise me that"——

"I'll try." A submissive note had crept into her voice. "God knows how I pray to forget. But that is not all the memory Africa has saddled me with. Forgive me—oh, don't think me hysterical—but sometimes I have felt I must go mad if I did not tell some one—put the thing into words. You know Mrs. Saxe had demonstrated to me beyond doubt that—that Jack was dead. Yet in that fever delirium it seemed that he came to me. The same man and yet not the same—subtly changed. Not a ghost—not a phantom. A man of flesh and blood who held me in his arms all through one night of fear and pain in that awful forest." She turned away with a twisted face. "It was hard to bear before that—but this memory. It no longer seems possible to forget!" She turned on him with abrupt passion. "And now I would give the world to forget!" she cried.

And to Conrad Tring it seemed as though, in the silence that followed, the wheels of the train took up her words and twisted them into its rhythmic song.

"I would give the world to forget . . . but this memory . . . is impossible to forget . . . impossible to forget."

The sunlight tipped the crests of the little waves that roughened the breast of the river with flame; above the river the blue veil of London's eternal mist was shot with rose. Conrad Tring, standing in the bow-window of the paneled room in Dane street, told himself that this glimpse of London that his windows framed—river and sky and the mystic intricacies of the network of naked trees in the embankment garden—could not have showed itself in more alluring fashion. He hoped the glow would not have died from the sky before his visitor came.

Turned to Window

He looked round the room he had prepared for Clemency Westgarth's reception, with the half-pathetic satisfaction of the celibate—man or woman—in things inanimate, and turned back to the window again.

It was nearly two months now since the day he had welcomed Clemency back to England. As he stood there the thought came to him, fraught with a faint surprise.

True, their friendship had grown to a fine-knit thing in the time—but friendship to last a lifetime may be consolidated in an hour—yet in actual point of time it seemed hard to believe that eight weeks had passed since, in the rushing train that carried them to London, the girl had lifted so fully the curtain of her confidence and showed him those hidden visions that had come to her in her fever delirium.

From that day to this, the subject had not been again mentioned between them. The girl had never alluded to it herself, and, much as he would like to have questioned her on the matter, he had not cared to obtrude on her reticence. Sometimes he hoped she was beginning to forget, but the veiled look that had come into the clear eyes never to leave them, gave always the lie to this hope.

He could hardly have told what his own conclusion on his thoughts of the matter was.

Had John Martindale met her by some extraordinary chance in the forest? Had he, for love or pity, proved himself false to the other woman also? Knowing nothing certainly, it was impossible to form definite conclusions, and his growing tendency was to believe the obsession of these memories to be the result of the long strain and grief that had preceded her illness, as much as the result of the illness itself.

The presence of the Scotsman Grieve, who had conveyed her down to the coast and had apparently treated her with great devotion, was in itself enough to forbid any lasting belief in the reality of her visitors, for Grieve had strenuously denied their reality.

And it did not enter into the calculations of either Clemency herself nor of Conrad Tring that Grieve could have any personal reasons of his own for suppressing all mention of the mishap that had come to his party in the forest.

At the sound of a knock, Tring started back from the window and went through the dark little hall, where the pierced brass lamp burned dimly, to open the door himself.

"So you have come," he said by way of welcome. "I hardly dared to believe it possible that you would."

"But I promised," Clemency said, with a note of protest in her clear voice.

She was looking very well. The electric light on the landing showed that the exertion of climbing the steep stairs had brought a tinge of color to her cheeks; her eyes were bright, with the glint of a smile in them. Her glowing face, framed by the richness of fur and velvet, looked like some exquisite living flower, Tring thought.

"Oh, but you have rather a reputation for breaking promises of this sort, haven't you?" he laughed. "Or is it that you have fallen under the shadow of my aunt's reputation?"

Clemency laughed as she followed him into the sitting room.

"You do well to leave a loophole for retreat, else my reputation would have compelled me to refuse the hospitality of any one so libelous," she said. "I admit that Lady Winterbourne is a little dreadful, but then, she doesn't mean to be. She is just a perfect dear, who simply cannot realize that there are, at the very outside, only nineteen working hours in the twenty-four."

"Rather a trying dear at times, I am afraid," Tring said, significantly.

"What do you mean?" Clemency glanced at him innocently, and catching the infection of his smile, strove to look grave. "I refuse to discuss Lady Winterbourne with you," she said with dignity. Then joined in the laughter into which he broke. "Oh, dear, I am afraid I have a great deal to tell you! But don't let us talk of it yet. I have sinned beyond all forgiveness. No, I refuse to talk of it. What a perfectly beautiful room!"

A Clerical Chaperon

"Do you like it?" Tring looked round with an air of pleased proprietorship. "I am so glad, though I am candid enough to confess that I should have been dreadfully disappointed—in you—if you hadn't. But you must tell me what has upset my aunt. I am dying to know. My aunt is an object of perennial interest to me. Did she disapprove of your coming here to-day? I assured her I would provide a chaperon."

"But you haven't?" Clemency asked in a tone of vague alarm, as she glanced round.

"He hasn't come yet," Tring said. "He is rather a busy person. I wonder if you will be pleased or sorry"——

"Is it Father Armstrong?" Clemency's face flushed a little. "I wonder how I guessed," she said, "but I shall be very glad to see him."

"I thought you would."

She did not question him, though it almost seemed as though he expected to be questioned. She went over to the window and stood looking out at the river that ran, molten gold now, in the rays of the sun that declined perceptibly in the few minutes since she had entered the room.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

The American Boy

By THOMAS TAPPER

Training the Boss

WHILE you are in school you are apt to feel that everybody is trying to train you. When you get into business you can change this.

You can begin, the first morning that you go to work at your job, to train the Boss. And Bosses, with few exceptions, require a vast amount of training before they get to see certain things in the right way.

But, if you are determined, it can be done, and it is worth doing.

Here is the way to go about it:

Begin to study the Boss. He will probably pay no attention to you; or, if he does, he will look at you more or less in a manner that makes you feel as if you were in his way. While you are studying him, make him learn something about yourself. This will be hard teaching, for you will have to give him lessons in training without his knowledge. So it will go a little slowly at first.

Reach the elevator every morning a little before opening time. You will then be on hand when the Boss comes in. It may happen once in the first two years that he will want you the moment he comes in. When this day comes you have taught the Boss the First Lesson he must learn. He will say to himself:

1. "That boy is prompt in the morning."

If it takes him a couple of years to learn this fact, do not be impatient with him. He is busy, and the amount of time he has to study the lessons you put before him is small.

But this is the very reason why YOU SHOULD NEVER LET UP ON HIM.

When he has taken notice of your Promptness in the morning, the next lesson is easy for him.

Make him see that you are prompt in everything you do; that when you are called, he can rely on you coming.

When you do come to his call, make him observe these things also. Say nothing to him. It is his duty to look and see. These are his Second Lesson:

No. 2 "Neat-looking boy; dresses quietly; necktie and socks do not blind a man's eyesight; clear eye; acts quickly."

It will take a considerable number of calls for him to get these down pat; but you stick to it, and he will learn them after a while.

Then, some day, he will call you to his desk and ask you to explain something to him, or to go and do something and bring him a report. When you have done this, set the Third Lesson before him.

3. "That boy talks clearly, answers questions directly, has power of observation, looks me in the eye, keeps still while he speaks, and never gets excited or nervous."

This is quite a lesson for a man, but after two or three repetitions he will have it letter-perfect, and you can quietly make him ready for the Fourth Lesson.

An American Boy was asked to mail an important letter. Something made him think that he would go out of his way and register it, though no one had told him to do it. And he did. Some days later the Boss was worried because the firm to whom the letter was addressed declared they had never received it. The Boy went to the letter file, took out the registry receipt and handed it to the Boss.

This is called Silent Teaching. The Boss learns this kind of a lesson quicker than any other. So Lesson Four is:

4. "This boy can be relied on to go to considerable trouble when his judgment advises it. He has good business habits."

The Boss is certainly getting on. If up to date you have done all your work so that it has been impressed on your employer that you are: Prompt, Neat, Clean, Quick of Action, Clear of Speech, Direct in your Replies, of Good Judgment and willing to take extra pains when necessary, you have set an object lesson, or a series of them, before him that no man can fail to learn.

Some day, while this is going forward, an occasion will arise when you will be trusted to do a greater task than has ever before been given you. Don't be afraid of it. You will be able to do it, for you have been cultivating the very qualities, habits and judgment that are required.

You will have learned, from your past, to waste no words; to work with system, to keep out of the way, never to watch the clock, never to be jealous of any one else. In short, you will be on the job at all times, with all of your mind ready for it. You will never let pleasure interfere with business—in fact, business itself will be your greatest pleasure.

What about pay?

Any boy who can make the Boss learn the facts of these Four Lessons will find that he has also learned, all by himself, what it is right to do about pay. He does not need to be taught this.

On August 31, H. D. Lombard sailed from San Francisco to make a trip around the world in his thirty-five horse-power Fiat, with Harry Heard as driver. This car is a five-passenger phaeton type on the regular Fiat chassis made at Poughkeepsie and is absolutely a stock model throughout, except that provision has been made for carrying extra baggage.

MANY OVERCOME IN FIRE AT CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Nov. 27.—Nearly a score of firemen were injured, five children were overcome by smoke and rescued in an unconscious condition and members of twenty-five families were driven to the street in a fire in a four-story factory building at Nos. 521-531 Vedder street early to-day which for a time threatened to wipe out the entire block. Additional calls for more fire-fighting apparatus were sent in quick succession. The loss is estimated at $100,000.

TWO EXPLOSIONS DESTROYED MAINE

HAVANA, Nov. 27.—The Maine inspection board will start for home some day this week. It has already been amply demonstrated to the members that the Maine was destroyed by an outside explosion which occurred under the ship a little to port of the keel. The outside skin was blown up and doubled over toward the starboard side by the first explosion. After this the transverse armor bulkhead was blown aft from frame 24 by a second explosion.

Maria Gay Makes French Tenor of Zenatello, Italian Singer

Maria Gay instructing her husband in the mysteries of the French tongue and preparing him for his role as a French tenor.

Dramatic Tenor Changes with Public's Taste, Being Aided by Woman.

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

Just one moment. Permit me. I'd like to have you meet Giovanni Zenatello, the celebrated French tenor.

Yes, he's the man who used to sing for Hammerstein, the famous Italian dramatic tenor. How did he get to be French? Thereby hangs a tale.

Zenatello was content to be an Italian tenor, and all the great roles of French opera were unknown to him. He was great as Othello and Radames, and Manrico in Trovatore, but when it came to the new French stuff, nothing doing.

When Hammerstein went in strong for French opera, Zenatello found himself called upon infrequently, and after the manner of Italian tenors, brought suit against Oscar.

Fashions change in opera and singers have to change with them or they are left high and dry. Most of the Italian tenors refused to change and the tide went out and left them.

Enter Maria Gay to the rescue. "You shall sing French opera," said Maria.

"But I don't speak French," said the tenor.

"I will teach you," replied the contralto.

Of course it is understood that Gay and Zenatello are husband and wife. They were married a year ago. Maria Gay, being quick at noticing things, discovered early last year that French opera was going to be the rage this season. She at once began the work of turning Zenatello into a French tenor.

The first task was teaching him the tenor part in Carmen in French. On his first appearance he sang half the first act in French, tripped, slipped into Italian and never got back into French again.

But that was a beginning. He learned one French role after another and when Director Russell began to look around for French tenors last Spring up stepped Zenatello, being propelled forward by Maria Gay, and said:

"I am a French tenor."

Most French tenors are short on voice though long on action and diction. Nobody ever accused Zenatello of not being a great tenor, and Russell was glad to get him for his French department.

So he is going to make his debut as Samson in "Samson et Dalila," which is a very French role.

However, the end is not yet. Zenatello is still studying, and the enegetic Maria is his school mistress. She makes him reel off French verbs and nouns, corrects his pronunciation and sees that he doesn't get lazy.

Meanwhile the astute Maria is studying new French roles herself, for the Spanish lady desires to be present whenever things are being passed around.

POLICE SAY WOMAN SET FIRE TO HERSELF

Mrs. Clara Rosebeck, sixty, who died at the Linwood Street Hospital from burns she received at the home of Miss Ella E. Goss at No. 29 Arlington street, Hyde Park, the police declared to-day, was a suicide. The police allege Mrs. Rosebeck poured kerosene over her clothing and then set herself afire. Mrs. Rosebeck of late has suffered from a mental trouble and was under the care of a nurse. In her room, when she was found, an empty kerosene lamp with the burner detached was discovered and on the way to the hospital in the ambulance Mrs. Rosebeck is said to have declared she wanted to die.

ROBBERS CARRY OFF SAFE WITH $4,000

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—Two cracksmen forced their way into the postoffice at Palisade, N. J., just across the river from Manhattan, early to-day, picked up the safe there, carried it 300 feet away and then dynamited it and took its contents, $4,000 in stamps and cash.

OPERA SEASON OPENS TO-NIGHT

The third season of Boston opera begins to-night, when a spectacular production of "Samson et Dalila" will be given by the Boston Opera Company. The full resources of the organization will be taxed to surpass the performances made in New York by Hammerstein and in Chicago by the Dippel Company, but those who saw the dress rehearsal Saturday night declare that this will be the greatest Samson ever. Maria Gay will sing the role of Dalila. Zanatello will be heard as Samson.

"Samson et Dalila" is a French opera renowned for its beautiful music and tremendous demands upon chorus, orchestra, principals and scene painters. It is the old Biblical story of Samson, the strong man who had his hair cut off by a treacherous Philistine woman, and being shorn of his strength, fell into the hands of his enemies. In the end he destroys all their chiefs by pulling the temple down upon them. The last scene of the opera is the fall of the temple and it is said to be one of the most extraordinary ever shown upon a stage.

Eben D. Jordan, founder of the Opera Company, and Henry Russell, its director, declare that the prospects for the season are most encouraging. The house is sold out for the opening performance and the demand for seats for the operas of the first week is great. The season subscriptions are larger than ever and the box office people are now busy filling orders for seats for single performances.

Story of the Opera.

The management of the Boston Opera House requests that those who attend the performance this evening be in their seats precisely at 8 o'clock, as there will be chorus singing behind the lowered curtain and the disturbing noise of people entering will greatly interfere with the unity of the performance.

The following sketch of Saint-Saens' "Samson et Dalila," or Delilah, in English, opera is translated from Les Annales du Theatre et de la Musique, by Noel and Stoullig, in 1892, as published in the program of the thirty-sixth annual festival of the Worcester County Musical Association.

The prelude is singular. There is a darting phrase which is developed, and mingled with this phrase is a chorus of Hebrews, sung behind the curtain. The lamenting captives ask deliverance of God. The fugal form of the number which continues until the rise of the curtain indicated at once the severe and classic nature of the work. Samson arouses the courage of his co-mates, and prepares the revolt which the insolence of Abimelech hastens to fury.

Samson kills the Satrap of Gaza, and the Israelites exeunt at the right of the stage. The high priest of Dagon descends, attended from the temple, and curses Samson

Duet Chief Number.

The second act is in the valley of Sorek. Delilah's house is at the left. It is surrounded with Eastern and luxuriant plants. Night is coming on. Delilah sings a passionate appeal to Love, invoking his aid. Then comes the duet with the high priest, who, deceived by the feigned love of Delilah, begs of her to deliver Samson to him; Delilah reveals her real hatred in a dramatic burst.

The duet of Samson and the temptress is, as one knows, the chief number of the work. It is impossible to paint better the hesitations of Samson, as he stands between love and religious faith.

The great phrase of Delilah is a superb expression of passion. The orchestral storm hastens the action on the stage, and when the elemental fury is at its height, Delilah enters her dwelling. Samson follows her; and the curtain falls on the appearance of the Philistines to master their foe.

The first tableau of the third act is a lament of remarkable intensity. Samson mourns his sin, and a chorus of Hebrews behind the scenes reproach him and despair. The style is here rather that of the oratorio than the opera, and the effect is great. An exquisite chorus follows, "Dawn Now on the Hilltops," which brings to mind the chorus of Philistines in the first act. Then comes the ballet so well known in concerts.

BEATTIE IS BURIED NEAR WIFE'S GRAVE

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 27.—The body of Henry Clay Beattie, Jr. lies in Maury Cemetery beside the grave of the wife he murdered on July 18. The simple funeral services were held at midnight and the body was buried at sunrise. A wagon load of flowers was laid up on the grave by friends and relatives of the convicted wife slayer. The cemetery was besieged by people when it became known the funeral had taken place and the police found it difficult to preserve order.

SEVEN-FOOT COFFIN FOR GIANT IN LYNN

Benjamin Ames, Lynn's tallest man, is dead. He was a coal dealer, and stood six feet five inches in his stocking feet and weighed 350 pounds. A casket seven feet long, four feet wide and two and a half feet deep, has been ordered for his body. Ames had been a familiar figure in Lynn. A characteristic was his aversion for walking on sidewalks. He always took to the street. Ames died of heart failure.

VICTIM OF KNIFE EXPECTED TO DIE

WAREHAM, Nov. 27.—The police of this town and surrounding cities and towns are to-day hunting Frank Yachner, who is wanted in connection with the stabbing of Frank Jusvich yesterday afternoon in West Wareham. Jusvich is not expected to recover. John Gallas has been placed under arrest. According to the police, the stabbing followed an affray at a friend's wedding. All three men are employed by the Tremont Nail Company.

WHAT'S BROWN BREAD RECIPE?

"Oh, if I only had some brown bread like mother used to make," said the otherwise happy husband who have come home Saturday night for his baked beans and brown bread.

His dutiful young wife said she did the [illegible] she could, but the trouble was she [illegible] have the right recipe.

Now there is happiness in the household and no more weekly kicks on Saturday night, for the watchful wife has found one in the AMERICAN that she can make to the king's taste, and her husband even admits that "it's just like mother used to make."

Thousands of homes have experienced this same happy condition because Mrs. Delmar of St. Louis asked the Boston AMERICAN for the best recipe for brown bread, and the AMERICAN knowing the generosity and expertness of the New England housewife, put the question up to them. Since then the office has been flooded with the finest recipes ever used for brown bread.

The AMERICAN offers $10 in prizes for the best recipes. To the best a prize of $5 will be given. For the next five best will be $1 each. The winners will be judged by impartial judges. Addresses recipes to the Brown Bread Editor, Boston AMERICAN. Here are a few of the brown bread recipes picked up at random:

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS; FINANCIAL NEWS

COPPERS STRONG IN WALL STREET

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—Union Pacific and the copper stocks led an upturn in the stock market immediately after the opening to-day that carried prices to a plane substantially above Saturday's closing. The buying that forced prices upwards came from several sources.

Union Pacific gained 1½, moving up to 178⅛; Amalgamated Copper rose 1¼ to 64¼. Smelter gained half, while Anaconda and Tennessee Copper also made substantial fractional gains.

In some quarters the strength of the market was attributed to a growing belief that the session of Congress will do nothing in the way of enactments to cause nervousness to business.

The tone of the market was firm throughout. Steel common, which closed Saturday at 64¼, rose to 65, an advance of ⅞ after opening at 64¾. Other gains were made as follows: Erie common ¼, Reading 1, Lehigh Valley ⅜, Canadian Pacific ⅛, Southern Pacific ½ and Southern Railway ⅛.

The curb opened firm with American Tobacco exceptionally strong. It opened with 408 bid, an advance of 9 points over Saturday's closing. Americans in London were firm and above New York parity. Canadian Pacific in London was largely bought.

State Street News

Many doubts have been removed and whereas a short time ago financiers and business men did not feel like taking chances they are not afraid now to be venturesome, at least in a modified way.

$ $ $

It is sad to relate, but it is necessary to state that the Government of the United States has really been taken out of the hands of public authorities by popular consent and turned over to the Congress of Business.

$ $ $

The banks, the railroads and the industrial corporations have all decided to obey as nearly as possible all the laws passed by Congress, and, having done so, to fight the politicians to the last ditch if they interfere.

$ $ $

In the steel industry the only change that seems possible is in the direction of improvement. Railroads have refrained from purchasing material, but the buying movement recently begun in rolling stock must extend to all departments. An advance in the price of steel, which seems assured at an early date, ought to increase the buying.

$ $ $

Everybody is reconciled to quiet business, and that fact insures a gradual increase of business, for such growth as occurs will be on a firm foundation. There are specks of pessimism in the financial world, but the constant growth of railroad gross earnings and bank clearings prove that business really is improving. In spite of the high wages that prevails, net earnings are also satisfactory.

Simple Home Remedy for Kidneys and Bladder

A simple and easy way to cure weak, deranged kidneys or bladder is to use the following formula: Get six ounces good pure gin and add to it one-half ounce Murax Compound and one-half ounce fluid extract Buchu. Take one to two teaspoonfuls of this mixture after each meal and at bed time. Nearly all good druggists have these ingredients. Anyone can mix.

Weak kidneys or bladder should be given attention as soon as any of the well-known symptoms are noticed. Neglect in the matter is dangerous, as the serious forms, Bright's disease, chronic rheumatism or dread diabetes, may develop. These can be avoided if the above simple mixture is used before complications set in.

AT THE OLD HOWARD THIS WEEK
PUNT
A punt is something where a kicker gets in his licks. Oftentimes they hand you the josh that the star punter has been on the hospital list all Fall, but just as the big game comes into view, he throws away his "props" and things look rosy. The old gag about sprained wrists, wrenched backs no longer appears on the daily bulletin. No matter how big the game you can always find bigger game at the Howard. Always something doing from 1 till 11 at the old Howard.

Thanksgiving Day Show Starts at 12
Sam Devere BURLESQUERS
An old-time title and an old-time show with Will Ward, Pearl Laight, John Early, Mull Clark, Gertrude Lynch, Lillie Stevens, Grace Harmon, and others, will lineup ready to score in the first period. They're pretty classy with that kick stuff—so look for field goals at every show. Pretty girls everywhere running about the gridiron. See the bunch that has not been scored against. Also a big continuous show—the best in town.

Wines and Liquors.

The Quality and Price

Of liquors are the important questions. Don't you think that a concern 30 years in the liquor business and having important connections with distilleries, besides owning our brewery, can give you finer liquors at lower prices than a small concern that is here today and gone tomorrow? There is no middleman and no jobber to make a profit from your dollar. That's why we sell bottled quantities at barrel prices. Our mail order department will be completely satisfactory to you, if you can't call yourself—and now, read this:

Hobble Skirts and High Heels, or Health and Happiness?

You May Take Your Choice, Madam, but You Cannot Have the First Two and the Last Two at the Same Time.

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner

With a spirit of profound humility we suggest to the women who read this newspaper that they read the paragraph from the news of recent date, which we print below. Together with the humility we feel a certain sense of pride, for the statements which we reprint have been made in this column many times. We shall not, however, be so base as to say "We told you so," but make haste to lay before you the item.

HOBBLE SKIRT HARD ON HEALTH

Tight-Fitting Clothes Aid Tuberculosis, Says Chicago Commissioner

Chicago.—Hobble and tube skirts and other tight-fitting garments are cited as causes of tuberculosis by Herman Spalding, chief of the Bureau of Medical Inspection. Loose-fitting clothes are, he says, proper for maintaining health and happiness, and he recommends that coats and underclothing be purchased about four sizes larger than those to which you have been accustomed, if they have been tight-fitting.

If you have been wearing a tight-fitting hobble or tube skirt, he advises you to forget the styles and order a hoopskirt. Another recommendation is that when you walk along the streets you should shrug your shoulders and allow the cold air to circulate beneath your clothing. If you would have health, you must give the skin air, just as you would the lungs.

For many years this paper has been earnestly beseeching women NOT to wear clothes that interfere with the circulation, hamper freedom of movement, and result in a state of health that is deadly to complexions and productive of dingy, lustreless hair and dull, watery eyes.

Never has there been in this colmun a word against woman's Heaven-given right to make herself as beautiful as possible. The utmost that the milliner and the dressmaker can do to gild the refined gold of feminine loveliness ought always to be done. When the poet Burns bewailed the melancholy fact that man was made to mourn, he might have found not only truth but an excellent rhyme in the added statement that woman was made to adorn.

No silks from the Orient, no fabrics from the modern loom, are too fine for women's wear. The foamy creations that Miss Nell Brinkley spreads on her bristol board would, could they be reproduced in all their delicacy by the designer of costumes, be entirely appropriate to garnish the attractiveness of living women.

BUT—it is quite possible to be beautiful without being unhealthy. It is quite possible to be charming without confining the neck so that the blood must move sluggishly to and from the brain—without canting the body forward at a ridiculous angle by heels that are at least an inch and a half higher than they ought to be.

We have received a letter from a woman who says: "If we were to dress as you advise us to, we would all look dowdy; our husbands would never dare to take us out in public; we should be a laughing stock for women wherever we went."

With due deference to this opinion, we are compelled to disagree with it.

Dress can be made attractive without making it fatal to health. And any dress, however elaborate it may be, that is fatal to health IS NOT ATTRACTIVE.

If a woman chooses to wear a hat that stands out like a lighthouse on a sandy shore, that is her affair. The height of the hat may and probably will retard the circulation in the scalp and make the once luxuriant hair thin and dingy, but it will not greatly disturb the general health.

Tight clothing and high heels are NOT ENTIRELY THE AFFAIR OF THE WEARER. They are a menace to the future generation; they endanger the happiness of her husband, her children, of all who love her and depend for their comfort on her continued good nature and ability to "warn, to comfort and command," as Wordsworth put it.

No woman has the right to follow fashion so slavishly that she risks that most terrible of maladies, consumption.

That, indeed, brings pink cheeks, but they last only a little while, and when their unhealthy glow is burnt out it is succeeded by the pallor that brings a shudder to the beholder.

It is right that fashions should change; that woman should think of her adornment is certainly right. To desire to appear this year in a costume different from that of last year, to feel that comfort that comes from "looking as well as the woman next door"—these things can do no serious or permanent harm.

But to commit slow suicide by pinching in the waist, cramping the lungs, denying the air free circulation about the body—has any woman the right to do that, no matter how earnestly she is devoted to fashion, or how ample are her means to keep up with its every change?

We ask our women readers carefully to study the item we have printed, and seriously to think about it.

Health and happiness keep company; high heels and hobble skirts are usually inseparable companions. But the first two will never associate with the last for long, and, renewing our attitude of humility, we suggest that NO FASHION IS SUFFICIENTLY DESIRABLE TO BE PURCHASED AT THE PRICE OF CONTRACTING TUBERCULOSIS.

The Eyes of Boston and of New England Are To-day Turned Towards St. Peter's, Angelo's Great Masterpiece, in the Eternal City.

Boston has a direct interest in the important events which are transpiring to-day at St. Peter's in Rome.

In the famous Sistine Chapel and in the historic Basilica of St. Peter's solemn ceremonies were held this morning, and others are to follow this evening, in which a central and distinguished figure is His Eminence the Cardinal Archbishop of Boston.

Never before in the centuries of the Catholic church has this young Republic of the West been given such signal recognition in the highest council of the ancient church as will be her right henceforward through to-day's exercises in the Eternal City.

Three Americans, each a distinguished and learned doctor of his church, become to-day, by their exaltation to the College of Cardinals, potent influences in the supreme direction of the mightiest Christian organization in the universe.

America has had for a quarter of a century one great and patriotic citizen as her highest representative in the Conclaves of Rome.

In the person of James Cardinal Gibbons, of Baltimore, the Catholic church in this country has been represented in the Cardinals' College by one whose Americanism is sound and true and patriotic in its every nerve and fibre.

Now that to a Gibbons there are added a Farley, a Falconio and an O'Connell, the strength of the representation of America at the Vatican is increased to a degree the actual measurement of which would be no easy task.

This may be said with absolute truth and confidence: the voice of America will not be silent when occasion arises, as it has arisen in the past, and as it must again arise and often in the progress of time, for the holding at Rome of a globe-wide council of the church to consider great problems and to arrive at decisions of vital interest to the Catholic world.

It is therefore natural that Boston and New England should take pride in what is passing to-day within the halls of the Vatican.

Among the watchful spectators at every ceremonial is Mr. C. O'Connell Galvin of the AMERICAN staff, who was sent to Rome as this newspaper's special correspondent to report and describe the impressive scenes of which he will be an eye-witness.

Mr. Galvin's pen pictures will be sent to this office by cable.

More extended descriptions will arrive by every mail from Italy. Through his presence in Rome the readers of this newspaper will have placed before them vivid portraits of scenes of the utmost dignity and interest. By means of those dispatches to the AMERICAN, each of our readers may feel personally present during the history-making proceedings of these days in the wonderful city by the Tiber.

Jobs as Is Jobs

By SAM SMALL, JR.

(Interviews by aeroplane that might as well have been and, but were NOT)

THE reporter, circling above Washington, was attracted by an illumination like that of a blazing sun at the door of the White House. He depressed the planes of his machine and gracefully volplaned to earth, landing in the President's front yard. Tripping lightly up the White House steps, the reporter addressed the brilliant object:

"Hi, Maje, how goes it?"

Major Archibald Willingham Clavering De Graffenreid Butt, A. Q. M., U. S. A., military aide to the President of the U. S., sometimes known as the human Christmas tree, for 'twas he, saluted precisely and made reply:

"Busy, Maje?" queried the reporter.

"Oh, yes, quite so; tremendously rushed, y'know."

"That sounds good. The public is always interested in men as has jobs as is jobs. Would you kindly consent to an interview telling all about your job?"

"Quite a bore, y'know," replied the Maje, but if he had consented to an interview no doubt it would have read like this:

"You see, I retire about midnight and sleep under two of the finest crazy work quilts that ever came out of dear old Georgia. At 9 my man calls me and I have my tub, my shave, massage, hair cut and shoe shine. Then I put on my morning jacket or lounge suit and have my breakfast of a rasher of bacon and some eggs. Then I stroll over to the White House and meet the President.

"At 11 o'clock I return to my quarters and change to my white duck uniform with the gold lace. Then I stroll back to the White House and have luncheon with the President.

"After luncheon I return to my quarters and change to my khaki uniform or riding togs. Then I gallop up to the White House on my charger and go for a ride with the President.

"Returning from the ride, I again visit my quarters and have another tub, massage, shave, haircut and a shoe shine and don my full-dress uniform with more gold lace than my white one. Then, returning to the White House, I dine with the President on the White House roof garden. After that I go to a show or on an automobile trip with the President; or, perhaps, if he is engaged for the evening, I drop in at a dance or a reception, or maybe spend the evening with the fellows at the club."

"Outside of that, have you anything to do, Maje?" asked the reporter.

The Maje shook his head.

"And how do you like your job?"

"Well, well, I never did mind hard work."

The reporter sighed with the Maje and left with such a heavy heart that it was hard to get his aeroplane off the ground. But when it did rise and the reporter circled aloft, his eyes could still catch the glint of that gorgeous figure at the door of the White House which nobody could mistake for a veto.
